EX-CHANCELLOR SLAIN IN GERMAN REBELLION

Today

The President's Broadcast.
Stepping on Toes.
Eyes Westernized.
Will Unions Arbitrate?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE PRESIDENT'S radio address contained one word which grated on the ears of many Americans, as it did, perhaps, on those of the President himself, and that was the word "PERMISSION," that occurred in a sentence concerning the strengthening of "our naval forces to conform with the intentions and PERMISSION of existing treaty rights."

The word was properly used, for while the treaty stands we are bound to ask the PERMISSION of other countries before we carry out plans for national defense.

The President has power to abolish those treaties that limit the right of this supposedly "sovereign nation" to do as it pleases within its own borders.

You can imagine what Cleveland, Jackson or Washington would have done to that word "PERMISSION."

THE ADDRESS contains a warning for those that, in the opinion of the new era, have made too much money, or made it too quickly, or too easily:

"The toes of some people have been stepped on, and are going to be stepped on."

The President calls his program only "a fulfillment of old and tested American ideals." The American ideal has always been to do the best possible. But there are some new IDEAS combined with the old ideals.

For instance, an individual or family not getting along in the East was formerly advised TO GO WEST, now the government proposes to TAKE them West and establish them. The President says concerning families that, in all probability, will never "in the existing surroundings find an opportunity for full self-maintenance, happiness and enjoyment, we will try to give them a new chance in new surroundings."

YOU MAY TRANSPLANT trees and they will grow, but people transplanted do not always grow.

The British tried sending idle coal miners to good farm land in Canada and the miners could not get back to their coal mines and their idleness rapidly enough.

Millions in the United States would consider life not worth living if they had to live three miles from a moving picture theater, or half a mile from a soda water fountain.

ON HIS TRIP the President will touch only American soil, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Hawaii. Returning he will visit great public works on the West Coast, and come back across the continent. Everybody hopes he will enjoy the trip, and bring back improved strength and health.

And everybody hopes that the great experiments that he is carrying out will succeed. The President himself has said that they are experiments, to be changed if mistakes are discovered.

Just what will come of doing away, even temporarily, with the law of supply and demand and the hard lash of necessity remains to be seen.

SPEAKING OF "toes stepped on," the British know something about the process. If you accumulate money in England, your descendants will not keep it long. Viscount Tredegar, who recently died, left a fortune of eleven million dollars. The British government, as inheritance tax, takes five million nine hundred thousand. If the idea spreads it may be necessary for the rich to teach their children and grandchildren to earn a living.

STRANGE IS fashion.

The conquering Manchu, of Tartar blood, compelled Chinese men to let their hair grow long, in "cues," or pig tails, that Tartars, galloping on ponies, might have something to take hold of when they wanted to cut off a Chinese head. Soon the Chinese became attached to their cues and objected to cutting them off under the republic.

FROM THE NEXT edition of the "American Weekly," a magazine distributed with the Hearst Sunday newspapers, you will learn that Japanese young ladies, wishing to look "western," employ surgeons to eliminate the characteristic Oriental slant of their "almond eyes," although that slant seems beautiful to many westerners.

A Japanese expert, Dr. Uchida, had "westernized" the eyes of ten thousand young Japanese girls before his colleagues realized that he had opened a profitable field.

BEFORE LEAVING, the President establishes a "steel labor board," consisting of three men, well chosen. This board will deal with the steel strike as "the national longshoremen's board" will deal with the strike of dock laborers on the Pacific Coast.

Employers and employes are said to have requested and accepted arbitration by presidential boards, but Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, has not spoken enthusiastically or definitely on the subject.

In labor disputes, good wages and short hours are not all that labor demands. It also demands the right to regulate and control industry through its own agents, and to collect union dues, more or less compulsorily. This has been necessary in the past and has resulted in improving conditions all over the world.

Whether organized labor officials will now allow presidential appointees to settle disputes in a way that might make unions, and the paying of dues, more or less unnecessary remains to be seen.

HIGH COURT UPHOLDS PENSION

County Commissioners Lose Fight; Many Benefited

The Allegheny County Pension Fund Board won its battle with the Board of County Commissioners today when the State Supreme Court handed down an opinion which ruled that the Commissioners should make an annual appropriation into the retirement fund.

Justice Kephart, who handed down the decision, upheld the ruling of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court and placed the cost of the Supreme Court appeal on the County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners had refused to appropriate $75,000 into the county pension or retirement fund on the ground that the fund was not solvent and as County Commissioners they could not legally provide money for a fund which, in their judgment, was not sound. Commissioners C. M. Barr and C. C. McGovern held up the appropriation, while Commissioner W. D. Mansfield favored making the allotment.

The pension fund board, which consists of the Commissioners, the Controller, the Treasurer and two employe representatives, obtained a favorable ruling from the local courts directing the Commissioners to appropriate the money. The case was taken to the Supreme Court by county solicitors.

Meanwhile many pensioned employes have been forced to seek help from relief organizations, the pensions which were halted, being their only means of support. Hundreds of letters were sent to the County Commissioners from the pensioners, asking that they make the appropriation to prevent the retired employes from going on relief rolls.

BOLT KILLS 2 FLEEING STORM

Downpour Breaks Heat Wave as Mercury Sets New Mark

Residents of the Pittsburgh district today heaved a sigh of relief when the scorching heat was broken after last night's storm, which, accompanied by lightning, did considerable damage throughout the district.

Two persons were killed during the storm in Apollo, Pa., struck by lightning, and three other deaths yesterday were attributed to the heat which reached an all-time record for the second straight day before the storm brought relief.

The record for today is 96, set in 1878, but overcast skies were expected to prevent any new mark being established today. At 9 a. m. the mercury had reached only 75 as compared with 81 at the same hour yesterday.

The two killed near Apollo were Earl Griffith, 46, and Paul Fulton, 10, who were found dead under a tree where they had sought refuge while cutting wheat in a field.

FOUNDRY WORKER DIES

Theodore Vosivak, 55, of 51 Twenty-first street, died late yesterday in St. Francis Hospital, from heat prostration, shortly after collapsing in a Smallman street foundry, where he was employed, according to the Coroner's report.

Missing since 2 p. m. yesterday, the body of Raymond Brickler, 36, McKees Rocks car repairman for the P. & L. E. Railroad, was found today on a sidetrack in the McKees Rocks yards, where he apparently had collapsed from the heat.

Mutiny's Target?

ADOLF HITLER

Militaristic Herr Hitler, Germany's chancellor-dictator and Lord of the Nazi party, against whose brown-shirted hordes the Berlin Storm Troopers today were reported in open mutiny.

VON PAPEN HELD, HITLER FIGHTS MUTINY

BULLETIN

BERLIN, June 30.—(AP.)—Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, who two weeks ago startled Germany by criticizing certain radical practices of the Nazi government, today was taken into "protective custoday" together with three members of his staff and removed to the secret police headquarters.

BERLIN, June 30.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today rode roughshod over foes attempting to overthrow his regime.

Former Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher, reactionary and monarchist, was killed by police when he resisted arrest as a conspirator.

Capt. Ernst Roehm, national commander of the Nazi Storm Troops and one of the most advanced radicals, was deposed from power and ejected from the Nazi party.

Premier Herrmann Wilhelm Goering of Prussia announced that he was carrying out drastic police action on Hitler's personal orders against Nazi Storm Troop leaders attempting to force a second German revolution.

GOERING WARNS HEADS WILL FLY

His measures, he said, were extended in two directions—against absolute reactionaries and absolute radicals. He told reporters:

"In order that no false news might get out, I have ordered all communications with foreign countries stopped for the present until you hear my statement which gives you the undiluted truth, but I warn you seriously not to let your imagination run wild.

"For weeks we have known that a certain clique of Storm Troop leaders have been attempting to mislead the brave and decent Storm Troop men on to a path leading to revolution.

"That would necessarily have led to the overthrowing of the state.

"The chief of the secret police and my police organs have watched these men minutely and know what they had in mind, namely, a second revolution.

"Der Fuehrer (The Leader, I. E., Hitler) is determined to make an example and to let the whole world know that whoever raises his hand against the Third Reich (the present government of Germany) loses his head.

"Roehm and co-workers thought they could bring pressure to bear upon Der Fuehrer but he got ahead of them. Der Fuehrer has had Roehm arrested and put into jail where he will await judgment.

"Many group and upper group leaders (of the Storm Troopers) also have been seized and will await their day of judgment.

"Der Fuehrer ordered me to represent him in this action, which I shall carry out without giving quarter."

WAR-LIKE SCENE IN BERLIN

Even as Goering made his announcement, the streets of Berlin were being patrolled by steel-helmeted policemen armd with rifles.

Hitler's crack special guard, the black-shirted Schutz Staffel, were to be seen on duty at the various headquarters of the brown-shirted Nazi Storm Troops.

Goering, Prussian premier, said:

"All of Prussia is firm in my hands. The Schutz Staffel and my police have everywhere taken charge of party headquarters.

"The Storm Troops have not offered any resistance. They were merely misled."

To a query at government headquarters as to why the Reichswehr was stationed before the Munich "Brownhouse," an official replied:

"You will presumably find that the Reichswehr is on special duty throughout the Reich (Germany), but all that will be explained later in the day."

Besides the official buildings in Berlin, special police guarded such buildings as the Columbus House

POLISH FLIERS UNREPORTED

DUBLIN, Irish Free state, June 30.—(AP.—No word came today from the brother trans-Atlantic fliers, Benjamin and Joseph Adamowicz, due over Ireland on their projected non-stop flight from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Warsaw.

All along the coast eyes were strained to the West, one of the many vigils for daring fliers of the past few years.

Weather conditions were almost ideal except for a slight haze. The Brooklyn soda pop manufacturers had a full moon and a northwest wind to aid them last night.

More than 24 hours had elapsed since the takeoff from Harbor Grace at 4:58 (Pittsburgh time) yesterday. The brothers had hoped to be in Warsaw within 30 hours.

BLAST SHAKES MILLVALE

A mysterious explosion that damaged an apparently vacant building at 329 East Ohio street, Millvale, early today, was under investigation by police and county detectives.

The blast ripped up flooring in the vestibule, blew out a window in the front of the building, shattered windows in the feed store of M. W. Shearer at 331 East Ohio street and jarred oil cans from a shelf in a gasoline station 600 feet away.

Thirty minutes after the explosion, the place had been roped off and boarded up. Admission was denied to any one. Millvale Police Chief Philip Mitzel said that two months ago he investigated rumors of gambling in the building. He said he found five men on the second floor playing hearts but without money before them.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 30.—Family feuds of the bluebloods were forgotten today in honor of the gala wedding this afternoon of Ellen Tuck French and John Jacob Astor III.

In this cradle town of the social register, where the Astors speak not to the Gillespies, the picked 200 guests were assembling for the picturesque ceremony and the festivities to follow.

Private detectives were checking up jewels, valets and personal maids were rushing hither and yon and newspaper photographers were paying fancy prices to Tony Vosco, local fruitier, for use of his upstairs windows which overlook the entrance to Trinity Church.

3 FAN DANCERS HELD AT BUTLER

BUTLER, Pa., June 30.—Three fan dancers, one fortune-teller and 10 men faced a hearing before Alderman John D. Clark here today as a sequel to a raid on the Volunteer Firemen's carnival at Petrolia, Pa., last night.

Sergt. E. J. Price, of the Butler barracks, led a squad of 10 State Police and County Detective Hardy Hepler in staging the raid.

The three fan dancers were charged with indecent exposure. The 10 men were held for operating gambling devices and the fortune-teller was held for telling fortunes.

The carnival had been running all week and will close tonight.

NUMBERS RAIDS NET 5 MEN

Five men accused of operating numbers lotteries were seized by North Side police today in a series of raids on cigar and confectionery stores in Federal and Ohio streets.

The stores raided and the men held were:

At 204 Federal street, Charles E. Mitschlen, 33, of 314 Millbridge street; 112 East Ohio street, Matt Leibove, 51, same address; 127 West Ohio street, Norman Greene, 40, of 1513 Allegheny avenue; 102 East Ohio street, Louis Schwartz, 54, same address; 220 Federal street, Abe Gorenstein, 50, same address.

All were held for hearings.

Pirates Honor Dreyfuss On Silver Jubilee

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of Forbes Field is being observed today with much pomp and ceremony. The Silver Jubilee contest was given added spice through the fact that the Chicago Cubs are participating in the day's festivities.

The great Dreyfuss entry under the leadership of Fred Clarke opposed the Cubs of the Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance era when Forbes Field was opened and dedicated on June 30, 1909. Despite the many pretentious baseball fields installed in the intervening years, none is rated as highly as the home of the Pirates by the men and boys who play the game.

Among the high spots listed for this afternoon is the unveiling of a memorial to Barney and Sam Dreyfuss, father and son who did so much for baseball in Pittsburgh and for the whole National League. The memorial has been placed in the deepest section of centerfield.

Among the notables in town for the anniversary ceremonies was President John A. Heydler, of the National League.

The anniversary date also was marked by the installation at Forbes Field of a loud speaker system. The celebration will be capped tonight with a banquet at the William Penn Hotel in honor of Pirate President William E Benswanger.

COUNTY OFFICIALS NOTIFIED OF BIG FEDERAL LOAN

JOBLESS RUSH TO GET PLACES ON PROJECTS

Allegheny Officers In Washington to Aid in Contract

Allegheny County today received official notification, in writing, that the Public Works Administration had approved a loan and grant of $24,500,000 for public works projects and unemployment aid.

It followed briefly upon advice from Washington that the Rankin Bridge and the Dravosburg Bridge, the Saw Mill Run boulevard, the widening of Jerome street, McKeesport, and the artificial lakes and boathouse in North Park had been deleted from the program.

TELLS OF PROMISE

Commissioner C. C. McGovern, to whom Administrator Harold L. Ickes announced the loan, repeated today that he had been promised " the original application."

The application, as originally made, asked for $30,000,000 and included the projects cut out.

McGovern added that the Rankin Bridge, the approach to which fell last fall, was for the most part "a street car bridge."

He explained:

"It would be fine to get all. I'm glad they didn't cut out the Homestead or Glenwood bridges."

Commissioner C. M. Barr stated that he had been informed that the North Park lakes and boathouse had been taken out, but the federal government had allowed for a swimming pool and a water line in the park.

JOBLESS JAM COURTHOUSE

The announcement of the granting of the loan and its promise of 12,000 jobs brought throngs of unemployed men to the Courthouse to register or request jobs. Applications were accepted, although how the work will be done awaits the granting of the loan and the meeting of the Allegheny County Authority, which will direct the expenditures and the projects.

Remaining projects included in the loan are the Homestead and the Highland Park high level bridges, the Fort Duquesne Bridge and twin tunnels, which will join downtown Pittsburgh and the South Hills; the Glenwood and Jerome street bridges and the Liberty Tubes plaza, designed to solve the traffic problem at the south end of the Liberty Tubes.

The Fort Duquesne bridge and tunnel project, approved by the PWA officials, was recently substituted by the County Commissioners for the Wabash bridge and tunnel proposal, discarded by government engineers. The Wabash tunnel project was included in the county's original application for funds.

PWA SUPERVISION

Work on the projects is expected to begin as soon after the loan is granted as the federal engineers and the County Authority can start. A delegation of PWA engineers is expected to visit Pittsburgh next week. During the course of the work, strict federal regulation will be placed on the materials and construction. It is understood they must meet government specifications and the materials so allocated as to provide as much employment as possible.

The policy is to hire as many local men and buy as much local material as possible, it was asserted.

East Liberty Man to Face Federal Charge

Kenneth Robert Shields, arrested on Station street by the police, yesterday was turned over to the federal authorities. In a complaint filed before the United States Commissioner he was charged with transporting a stolen automobile from Wheeling to Pittsburgh, July 23, 1933. In default of $2,000 bond he was committed to jail.

Rum Store Sales Volume Contracts

HARRISBURG, June 30.—(AP.)—Liquor sales in state stores slumped against last week. After increasing about $38,000 the previous week, receipts fell from $640,241 to $607,001 in the week ending Saturday.

To date, sales have approximated $17,000,000.

U. S. BANS ARMS FOR CUBA

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP.)—The United States struck at terrorism in Cuba today by clamping an embargo on implements of war destined for that disordered island.

The proclamation issued last night by President Roosevelt was expected to strengthen the hand of President Mendieta in restoring tranquility to the republic, recently torn by violence.

Bombing have menaced Mendieta and Jefferson Caffrey, American ambassador. Two weeks ago machine gunners fired on a political parade, killing more than a dozen people.

Gun-running from Florida to Cuban ports had increased, Washington officials heard. President Roosevelt, acting under a joint resolution Congress passed in 1922, decreed the embargo to enable the Cuban government "to maintain peace and tranquility."

JAP WARSHIPS CRASH AT SEA

TOKIO, June 30.—(AP.)—The Japanese navy feared a loss of at least 13 men today in the crash of two warships and what appeared to be another tragedy, this one in the air.

Four men were known dead, two were missing and four were injured after the new 1,700-ton destroyers Miyuki and Inazuma rammed together last night during fleet maneuvers.

Three naval airplanes had been missing for more than 30 hours with a crew totaling nine.

The planes, attached to the aircraft Akagi, left Nagasaki morning bound for Sasebo. The coast was foggy. Other planes and warships have been searching for them since last night.

Both the Miyuki and Inazuma were cruising at high speed when they collided. The former's stern was caved in. The Inazuma was almost a total wreck, with her bows torn off.

Hays Man Arrested As Numbers Writer

CHOICE OF PARK HEAD ASSAILED

Councilman P. J. McArdle has taken a new slap at Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston for appointing Robert J. Templeton, of 3256 Waltham avenue, Dormont, as supervisor of Schenley Park. Johnston said the need of "expert" service justifies the appointment of a person outside the city.

McArdle declared:

"By no stretch of the imagination can the position be interpreted as expert service. It is my judgment that the employment of the present incumbent is in direct defiance of the plain provisions of the charter ordinance."

Previously Templeton had been appointed chief clerk of the Bureau of Parks, but was switched from that position to the supervisor's post when Council objected.

DORSEY FIRES INSPECTOR, 9 DETECTIVES

Police Head Drops Elias Wentzel in First Shakeup

One police inspector and nine city detectives were dismissed in a Police and Detective Bureau shakeup which becomes effective today.

It was the first major shakeup announced by Acting Supt. Jacob F. Dorsey, who has taken complete charge of police affairs which Supt. Ben R. Marshall left because of serious illness. Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell, who rejected Marshall's resignation, has granted the latter a leave of absence from duty.

WENTZEL DISMISSED

Inspector Elias Wentzel, appointed three months ago and in charge of the Lawrenceville police district, was dismissed. He was replaced by Albertus Keller, lieutenant of the traffic squad, who only two weeks ago was transferred to Central Station. Keller will be succeeded by Cornerman Walter J. Mullen.

The detectives dropped from the force are Chris Wolff, Murray Edlis, Joseph Linden, Elmer Henry, Michael Tortorelli, Robert Schaefer, John Fogarty, Thomas D. Malone and John Capp.

Those promoted to detectives are Robert Thompson, downtown cornerman; Edward P. Waugh, chauffeur to Supt. Marshall; James D. Ritchie, mounted patrolman; Alexander Thompson, mounted patrolman; Louis Foster, Squirrel Hill patrolman; John Haseman, North Side patrolman; Robert Burke and Harry Foster, East End plainclothesmen, and George Moelter, downtown cornerman.

ROUND UP THUGS

Burke and Harry Foster recently rounded up a gang of alleged safe crackers said by police to have been responsible for a series of robberies.

Two of the dismissed detectives are ineligible for pension. They are Edlis and Schaefer.

Politics was hinted as the reason for the ousting of Inspector Wentzel, an adherent of Councilman John M. Huston, reported to be at odds with Mayor McNair.

Lieut. Frank C. Ferris was transferred from the homicide division to the detective bureau. Lieut. Franklin T. McQuaide, former police superintendent, was placed in charge of the homicide detectives.

Transferred were Lieuts. George Pischke, from South Side to Central Station; Edward Arthurs, from North Side to Oakland; Arthur Baker, from Oakland to South Side; Dennis Hennessy, from Central to North Side; Walter Burns, from Penn Avenue to East End; Harry Hatters, from Center Avenue to Central, and Michael Carney, from North Side night turn to North Side afternoon turn.

W. R. Hearst Gives His Views on Anglo-Saxon Union to Keep Peace

By Special Cable

CARDIFF, Wales, June 30.—Under the headline, "World Peace in Hands of Anglo-Saxons," and the sub-headline, "But Mr. Hearst Wants the Debts Question Settled," the Western Mail and South Wales News presents an interview with the American publisher.

If the British Empire and the United States had the greatest sea and air forces in the world, they could probably (if they had the sense and the unselfishness) work together to make sure that the peace and security of the world be maintained.

William Randolph Hearst, the biggest figure in the American newspaper world, made this confession of his faith in the Anglo-Saxon peoples to me in an interview at St. Donat's Castle, his Welsh seat. He said:

"There has not been universal peace in the world since the 'Peace of Rome,' 1,800 years ago, when Rome dominated the world and compelled for some centuries, at least, conditions which fostered peace and progress.

Then I asked a few questions. Here they are, with Mr. Hearst's replies:

Question—"Is not the continuation of the war debts question a barrier to this union?"

Mr. Hearst—"Unfortunately, the repudiation of the debts has to a degree destroyed mutual confidence and esteem. I wish it could be settled fairly."

Question—"Was not America's contribution to the war millions of dollars, whilst that of Britain and France was millions of men?"

Mr. Hearst—"It was their war, not ours. The Allies said: 'We have our backs to the wall and if you do not come in we shall be destroyed.' But now they have their obligation to us."

Question—"We in Wales were amused at your statement that England had 'welshed on her debt.' Now that you have lived in Wales do you think that 'welshing' is a Welsh characteristic?"

SENSE OF HUMOR

Mr. Hearst has definitely a sense of humor. He twinkled in the first part of his reply and then grew serious:

"Welshing on a debt is a phrase devised by Englishmen to gratify the vanities and prejudices of Englishmen. But I said Sunday, in an interview, that since England had defaulted on its debt, it would be more proper and more accurate and more definitely descriptive to say that a man who had repudiated his obligations had 'Englished' on his debt."

"I do not know any occasion, public or private, when the Welsh have repudiated obligations. Certainly there has never been in all history such a conspicuous example of national default of honorable obligations voluntarily incurred and advantageously employed as the repudiation of England's debt to America."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Question—"Do you believe that the League of Nations can preserve peace?"

Mr. Hearst—"I do not believe that peace is to be established in a League of Nations, the majority of whose members are warlike. The present League of Nations is not a peace league, and the peaceful nations, instead of influencing the war-like nations and leading them into peaceful paths, will inevitably be dragged into the wars of the war-like nations.

"For this reason I have urged that America should keep free from all entanglements with the present League of Nations, which is controlled — and selfishly controlled — by the European powers.

"I should think that the people of the British Empire would feel the same way, and I am already confident that they of the Dominions do feel the same way."

OPPOSED TO WAR

I next mentioned Lord Davies' ideal of an international police force, but it aroused no enthusiasm in Mr. Hearst. He said:

"I should be opposed to an international police force. I do not want anything that would commit us to the possibility of being dragged into another war.

"The supporters of the League of Nations advocate that we must put teeth into the Kellogg Pact. Those are the teeth of war.

Mr. Hearst—"I think the President's idea is that the world should disarm in the interests of peace and civilization, but if there is to be a world race in armaments the United States is not going to be outdistanced and endangered in the race.

"Congress has given the Roosevelt administration billions to spend in providing employment for the people. The people who need work might just as well be employed in building ships for the defense of our nation as in any other way.

"Japan says she wants a great navy and can afford it.

UNITED STATES DEFENSE

"I don't think that any civilized nation can really afford to spend in armaments the money which should be devoted to developing the arts of peace, but the United States will surely not allow the forces of Japanese aggression to surpass our forces for defense.

"Japan is a war-like nation. The United States is a peaceful nation. We are so much opposed to war that we are willing to spend freely our treasure and our blood to keep our shores free from war-like attack and from the horrors of invasion.

"If there is to be a contest in shipbuilding and airplane building, the British Empire and the United States will win the contest.

"First—Because they have the dermination and the endurance.

"Second—Because they have the money.

"Third—Because the extent of their territory and the necessity of maintaining and protecting communication all over this territory provide the need for great fleets on the sea and in the air, even in peace, and those flotillas of peace may easily be transformed into squadrons of war.

HANDS OFF FAR EAST

"I have advocated that we keep our hands off the situation in the Far East, for I believe that we should not entangle our nation in the disputes of alien powers. If China cannot take care of herself it is her own fault, and it is due to an ultra-pacifist policy that prevented China from adequately protecting herself. If a nation of 350,000,000 people cannot defend herself from the aggression of a nation of 90,000,000 people that is her misfortune.

"We can sympathize with her; we can sorrow at her folly; but there is no reason why we should entangle ourselves in her disaster."

My final question was:

"What do you think of President's Roosevelt's influence?"

Mr. Hearst replied:

"Roosevelt's cheerfulness has been a fine factor in his work for the American people. Wilson said that a depression was largely psychological. It helps to end the depression if the public can be kept from being depressed. Mr. Roosevelt exercises a heartening and inspiring influence."

BUILDINGS GUARDED

Only properly credentialed persons were admitted to these buildings. The Columbus House is the headquarters of the Nazi office for cultural affairs.

Premier Goering and his adjutants appeared at the offices of the secret police about noon.

To a question as to why Goering was there, the secret police press chief answered:

"That is the first I have heard of it. You foreign newspapermen always seem to know more than we do."

Pressed for further details, he said:

"I know absolutely nothing."

At one sub-department of the Nazis, a veteran Storm Trooper tried by telephone to reach every Brown-shirted army sub-leader successively but, on every call, he received the stock reply that the man for whom he asked was out.

PEACE EFFORT UPSET

Fresh blasts from Nazi radicals heightened the impression today that Adolf Hitler's efforts to achieve a lasting peace between warring conservatives and radicals were bound to fail.

A bristling demand for extermination of "reactionaries" was made by the newspaper Deutsche Wochenschau, published by Gottfried Feder, the Reich's housing commissioner. In doing so Hitler's orders against controversy were ignored.

By "reactionaries" the newspaper meant the Stahlhelm, or Steel Helmet war veterans' organization, which has Monarchist leanings and is in conflict with the Nazi storm troopers and conservatives in general. The newspaper boldly declared:

"We do not care if a reactionary is of a humble or high station—for us Nazis he is to be wiped out."

The Steel Helmets announced a decision not to discuss their differences with the Storm Troopers in the press.

He, however, apparently must decide whether he will swing to the conservatives or accede to demands of the radicals.

Weather Conditions

Pressure is relatively low over the states east of the plains states, except for a high located over the Gulf states. Another high is centered in the Far Northwest and covers the northwestern country as far east as the Mississippi. Showers and thunderstorms were general yesterday and last night over the states from the central plains eastward, and the weather is mostly cloudy over that section this morning. The rainfall was mostly light. Temperature changes since yesterday were mostly lower cooler over the interior of the country, but the weather is still warm east of the Mississippi River, and moderately cool over the Northwest. High maximum temperatures occurred again yesterday in the Ohio Valley states and eastward to the coast, and westward over the central plains. The highest reported is 106 degrees at Kansas City.

River Conditions

The rivers are about stationary or falling slowly. Stage at Franklin is zero; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 10.4; Pittsburgh, 8.2; Dam No. 4, 8.7; No. 6, 7.3; No. 10, 7.8, and No. 12, 6.9. The dams are up.

Tube Toll, 'Brain Trust' Draw Ingersoll Fire

A ridiculous and obsolete imposition!

That's what Charles H. Ingersoll, watch manufacturer and New Jersey gubernatorial candidate, thinks of the proposed toll on traffic using the Liberty Tubes. Speaking to the Henry George Club yesterday he said:

"The people already have paid for the tubes in increased taxes. The assessment of a toll would result in double payment."

Denouncing President Roosevelt and his "Brain Trust" he said:

"The 'Brain Trust' is not delivering the goods, and for that reason must be checked by common sense."

He criticised President Roosevelt for "going to college to get his leaders, because he is a college man himself."

Pittsburgh, he said, is leading the way out of the depression, the underlying cause of which, he said, was the failure of governments to tax monopolies instead of forcing industry to bear the tax burden.

School Pupils' Police Guide, Friend Dies

Knoxville school children today mourned Patrolman Howard (Cabby) Lavelle, 43, who died yesterday in his home, 234 Wilbur street, after an illness of six weeks.

For eight years the genial patrolman watched over the pupils of the Knoxville and St. Canice schools as they crossed the streets on their way home. Occasionally, he treated the more careful children with candy. He served on the Carrick police force seven years before the borough's annexation to Pittsburgh.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning in St. Canice's Church.

He leaves his wife, Edna; his mother, Mrs. Sarah Lavelle; a son, Howard, Jr.; two step-daughters, Dorothy and Lucille, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Boyle and Mrs. Catherine Wilson.

of 18-year-old Ellen, was hobnobbing with his first wife, Mrs. Livingston French. The second Mrs. French was also present.

ENZO NOT PRESENT

Mrs. William K. Dick, second wife of young Astor's father, was on the guest list with Mrs. Enzo Fiermonte, mother of the bridegroom. (Enzo, the handsome Italian prizefighter, was not present.)

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie and their daughter, Eileen, who recently broke her engagement to Astor, were sailing for Europe today, having politely declined invitations to the wedding.

It is possible their paths may cross again, as the bridal couple are reported to be planning to spend their honeymoon abroad.

An affaire de trop (as they say in society) almost marred the eve of the wedding.

It had been planned to have Le Brun Rhinelander, pretty daughter of Mrs. Philip Rhinelander II, act as proxy for the bride at the dress rehearsal and march up the aisle on the arm of Jack Astor.

Then somebody recalled that Le Brun and Jack had been partners at many debutante parties before his romance developed with Ellen.

CHEESECLOTH TRAIN

So Lesley Bogert, sister of Beverly Bogert, one of Astor's ushers, was substituted as the rehearsal bride. She had a synthetic bridal train of cheesecloth pinned to her sports dress for the sake of realism.

The bridal party, after the rehearsal, attended a tea dance tendered by Mrs. Rhinelander and Le Brun, and everybody seemed happy.

The rehearsal ran off splendidly, requiring only three trips up and down the ancient aisle of quaint Trinity Church, the first Episcopal church in America, built 209 years ago.

French had to slip in and out the back door for the occasion, in order to avoid photographers, and two of the ushers were missing. And Mrs. French was nervous and warned the photographers that if they took her picture she wouldn't let them take any at the wedding.

Virginia French, 17-year-old sister of Ellen, will be her only attendant, acting as maid of honor. The bridegroom gave Virginia a diamond bracelet and a sapphire as a gift.

'LOVERS' LANE' TRIP

Mrs. George Brooke and their daughter, Betty, gave a dinner to the bridal party at "Seaside," after which Ellen and Jack rode together in "Lovers' Lane," the fashionable romantic avenue on the way to the French residence.

The Rev. Harold St. George Burrill will perform the ceremony this afternoon.

Lloyd P. Griscom will be Astor's best man.

A buffet luncheon will be given by Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Pope and their daughter, Miss Jane Pope, for the wedding party today.

MARLBOROUGH DIES AT 63

LONDON, June 30.—(AP.)—The Duke of Marlborough, the ninth holder of the historic title and former husband of Consuelo Vanderbilt, American heiress, died suddenly in London today. He was 63 years old.

Formerly active in public life, the duke was undersecretary of state for the colonies from 1903-5 and joint parliamentary secretary to the board of agriculture in 1917-18.

He married Miss Vanderbilt, a daughter of William K. Vanderbilt, in 1895, when she was only 17 years old. They were divorced in 1920.

The duke later married Miss Gladys Deacon, of Boston, and the first duchess became the wife of M. Jacques Balsan.

MAN 'STEALS' CAR, YOUTH

William Billinger, 17, of 2230 St. Luke's square, North Side, drove into a gasoline station at Pennsylvania and Irwin avenues last night and ordered a gallon of gasoline.

He left his car for a minute, and when he returned, found a man, about 40, at the wheel. Ordering the youth to step in and "keep your mouth shut," the intruder drove away.

The next stop was Warrendale, where Billinger's "fare" halted the auto, alighted and walked away with no more concern than when he entered the car.

Billinger barely had sufficient gasoline left to report the case to North Side police.

Overcome by the heat while passing circulars at South Eighteenth and Pius streets late yesterday, George Vis, 46, who gave his address as the Improvement of the Poor, Duquesne way, was taken to South Side Hospital, police reported.

Albert McCoy, 35, of 911 Sandusky street, collapsed while at work in a downtown newspaper office and was taken to Mercy Hospital.

BOLT HITS CHURCH

A church and a school were among the places reported struck by lightning during the night. Trees in various sections of the city were blown down by the wind that precededed the rain.

Lightning struck the steeple of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sewickley at Broad and Thorn streets, causing $1,000 damage and the chimney of the Rochelle School, Knox avenue and Rochelle street, Knoxville.

A bolt struck the home of A. J. Stack, Brant School road, Franklin Township, breaking the stovepipe and tearing pictures on the wall and damaging the furniture. None of the seven persons at dinner was injured.

HOME BURNS

Its roof struck by lightning, the Dudley S. Liggett residence, at 6216 Howe street, burned for an hour before firemen succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

Mrs. Liggett and two maids were in the house at the time. None was injured.

Damage, confined to the roof and upper floor, was estimated at $5,000.

Lightning also struck the roof of the home of William J. Friday, 304 South Graham street, during the storm and firemen were called to the scene. They found part of the roof torn away, but no fire. Damage was $100.

Other places reported struck by lightning were chimneys on the homes of U. E. Lippincott, 1206 Tybee street, and Frank Kossler, 1210 Tyndall street, the latter only a stone's throw from the Lippincott home. The top of a water tank above the plant of the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Corporation, North Side, ignited after it was struck by lightning.

Emergency crews were called out to repair wires torn down during the storm.

Rickenbacker Flight Loses to Rain Storm

NEWARK, N. J., June 30.—(AP.)—A bad storm near Pittsburgh and strong head winds interfered with the plans of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, head of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., to break his present speed record of 3 hours 10 minutes from Chicago to Newark yesterday. Rickenbacker, at the controls of a new Douglas plane, landed at Newark airport after a flight of 3 hours 40 minutes.

ALBERTA JURY VISITS GIRL'S TRYST

Premier's Accuser Leads Caravan to Lonely Road

Universal Service.

EDMONTON, Alta., June 30.—Without slightest show of hesitation, pretty Vivian MacMillan led a caravan of automobiles filled with jurors and court officers to the spot on a lonely country road where she claims Premier John E. Brownlee, of Alberta, made love to her on numerous occasions over a period of two and a half years.

The trial of her suit for damages, in which she alleges the Premier lured her here from Edson, Alta., and betrayed her, was delayed for two hours yesterday while the jury was making the unusual tour, and it appeared likely the case would not end before late tonight.

Besides making the trip into the country, the jurors visited the Brownlee home and in custody of the Sheriff inspected the bathroom and bedrooms which figured in the girl's sensational testimony.

Vivian earlier in the week testified that the Premier carried on his affair with her not only in the big government car, but at his home and in his offices in the Parliament buildings.

Mrs. Brownlee came loyally to the aid of her husband. She testified that never at any time had she noted a look or a glance between the Premier and Vivian which indicated they were more than friends, nor had the conduct of either ever aroused her suspicions.

THAW'S NEPHEW DIES IN PLANE

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., June 30.—(AP.)—Edward Thaw, of Milton, Mass., nephew of Harry K. Thaw, died today, second victim of an airplane wrecked in a forced landing in the Zuni Mountains near Grants, N. M., yesterday.

Brought to a hospital here in another plain, Thaw died without regaining consciousness. Thurle Ellis, the pilot, of Auburn, Me., died soon after he was taken from the wreckage.

Sam Taylor, a fire lookout at Oso Ridge, who saw the plane crash, said he heard the motor stop and that the pilot apparently was looking for a clearing to make an emergency landing.

The scene of the crash was not many miles from where an air liner plunged into the side of Mount Taylor, September 3, 1929, killing five passengers, two pilots and a courier.

Mrs. Myrtle Troste, 40, of 1512 Rockland street, Beechview, was to be given a hearing in Mt. Meanwhile city detectives were investigating the cause of the blaze, which was confined to the basement and caused no damage.

Following questioning, the woman was detained at Central Police Station last night. Acting Battalion Chief Joseph P. Fay and City Detectives Robert Thompson and Sam Schrenckengost investigated the premises following the fire.

According to neighbors Mrs. Troste moved into the house May 1. Other occupants are the woman's two sons, Herman, 21, and Clair, 19, and a roomer, Frank McGarvey. She was alone when the fire broke out, police said.

Universal Service.

VIENNA, June 29.—Another colorful chapter in the strange and varied career of Europe's dashing bigamist and "terrible lover," Ivan Poperjay, came to light today when he told police he had joined the French Foreign Legion in 1913.

Poderjay, jailed here on suspicion in connection with the disappearance of Agnes Tufverson, New York and Detroit woman attorney, aroused intense curiosity among police when he boasted he had deserted the Legion and made good his escape in 1931.

Authorities are holding Poderjay and Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, one of his wives, pending advices from the United States regarding extradition of the pair. Many of Miss Tufverson's clothes were found in Suzanne's possession.

REPRIEVE AGAIN DECIDED ON AT LAST MINUTE

New Trial to Be Asked On 'Death House' Confession

OSSINING, N. Y., June 30.—(AP.)—The hand of the executioner was stayed again today for Alina Antonio and her two men conspirators—stayed, but for little more than a week.

The story that saved them temporarily—a death cell statement by one of the men that Mrs. Antonio was innocent of the murder of her husband—was branded officially "a lie!"

For the second time in 48 hours Gov. Herbert H. Lehman lifted the shadow of the electric chair from the young mother, Vincent Saetta and Sam Peraci last night, as the hour drew near for their Sing Sing death walk.

OPPORTUNITY FOR PLEA

After weighing the statement of a day, the Governor announced:

"The District Attorney, while expressing the opinion that the statement of Saetta has no merit, in the interests of justice concurred that a reprieve should be granted.

"I am granting a reprieve until the week beginning July 9, 1934, in the case of all three defendants."

The information was communicated swiftly to Sing Sing prison, to Mrs. Antonio's cell in the death house.

HEAR NEWS IN SILENCE

Peraci and Saetta were just leaving the visiting cells, leaving to prepare for the end, when they heard. Each nodded in stoic silence.

It was the second time that they had steeled themselves for death. First it was Thursday night—they were to die at 11 o'clock, all hope of executive clemency abandoned. At 10 o'clock Saetta called Warden Lawes and whispered his story that he had killed Salvatore Antonio on Easter, 1933, not as a hired assassin of Mrs. Antonio so that she might collect $5,000 insurance money, but of his own volition, after a fight over $75 Antonio had borrowed and not repaid.

The execution was postponed until Friday night so that the Governor might consider the statement.

ASK NEW TRIAL

Again they were to die last night, at the same hour. At 10:02 p. m. Gov. Lehman gave them the new lease on life.

Daniel H. Prior, counsel for Mrs. Antonio, announced that he would make his motion for a new trial Monday to County Judge Earle H. Gallup, of Albany, the judge who presided over the trial in which the 28-year-old mother of three children and her two accomplices were convicted of murder.

New Wedding Rites Face Nudist Couple

By CORRINNE HARDESTY

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Participants in yesterday's nudist wedding—where the sum total of clothing for a party of 10 consisted of the skin of one small goat and a pair of shell-rimmed glasses—may have to repeat the ceremony.

Miss Mary Belle Spencer, prominent Chicago lawyer, as soon as her scandalized ears heard of the ceremony on the midway at a Century of Progress, where the bride wore a fine old hand-embroidered smile and the bridegroom was clad in the conventional worried look, said she planned mandamus action before Judge Joseph P David as friend of the court to have the wedding annulled.

The Rev. Percy Ward, who had a corner on all the wearing apparel—it was he who wore the goatskin and the glasses—performed the ceremony which made Jean May, 23, once of Amarillo, Tex., but more recently of the Zoro Nature Park, Roselawn, Ind., and Charles Mueller, son of a Milwaukee brewery official, man and wife.

Miss Evonne Stacey, 22, known at the Zoro colony as "Zorine, daughter of the sun," as bridesmaid wore a splendid costume, a perfect coat of tan. Three other young women attendants were dressed in matching costumes.

The best man, who had his troubles taking care of a ring with no pockets to put it in, was Max Hilbig, Milwaukee, and member of the Elysian colony, Mirror Lake.

Fair officials were not present to give their blessing to the happy couple. It is reported they were not invited.

St. Peter's, built 90 years ago, has been restored to its original appearance. In a recent historical survey of the American Institute of Architects it was cited as a most worthy example of early American architecture.

Over 10,000 Catholic Daughters of America, also, plan to gather for the services. This pilgrimage, headed by Miss Frances Maher, of Kane, national treasurer and State Regent of Pennsylvania, will include women from all sections of the state.

The Story of Salome

CHAPTER V

Told in Pictures By DAN SMITH

When the executioner had beheaded John the Baptist in prison as commanded, and brought the head to the king, Herod sorrowed over it, for he admired John.

Then Herod, keeping the pledge he had made to Salome, that he would give her whatever she might ask, sent the executioner with the head and gave it to her.

Carrying the head of John the Baptist, Salome then went and gave it to her mother Herodias, while John's disciples came and took up his corpse and laid it in a tomb. And Herodias thus had vengeance at last on him who had aroused her anger by telling Herod that he did evil in the sight of the Lord in taking her as his wife. (The End)

Nation-Wide Junior Birdmen Membership Passes 75,000 Mark; Growing Steadily!

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander

Greetings, Junior Birdmen! Our organization is growing by leaps and climbs and it shouldn't be long before we are 100,00 strong. That is quite a membership to talk of when we are only two months old.

For remember, Junior Birdmen, enrollment only started May 1. When you consider that we already have over 75,000 Junior Birdmen affiliated with our organization, that 100,000 goal isn't so far away.

Every one of you boys and girls can do your share by bringing in a new member. Certainly you must have one friend, a school chum or a neighborhood pal, who should be glad to become a Junior Birdman or birdwoman.

Perhaps you know of more than one, all the better, but if each of you brought in just one new member within the next week, look how our membership total would swell. Not only would it be over the 100,000 goal, but we would even top 150,000.

Junior Birdmen Wing Ranks Now

The highest Junior Birdmen Wing is that in New York, with a membership of over 18,000.

The second is that of San Francisco with 10,520 and next Chicago with 7,320.

Following these are Boston with 6,825, Los Angeles with 5,125, Detroit with 4,656, Baltimore, 4,118; Pittsburgh, 2,539; Seattle, 2,349, and Rochester with 2,115.

Air Dictionary List Number 25

Here we are members at the end of the first section of our Air Dictionary feature.

Before we start on our second section of the Air Dictionary feature, with list Number 26, I am going to publish a series of questions for you next week based on the first section of our Air Dictionary. The answers will appear the following day.

Here is the last list of our first section, list number 25:—

DIRIGIBLE—As an adjective, it means steerable or to be made to proceed in motion. As a noun, it refers to a rigid airship. The term, however, is now quite obsolete.

DISCHARGE HEADER—A tube through which air is conducted from the supercharger to the engine.

DISK AREA (OF PROPELLER)—The entire area of the circle swept by the tips of a revolving propeller.

DISPLACEMENT (ENGINE)—The total volume (air, gas, etc.,) swept by the pistons of all the cylinders during one complete stroke of each piston.

DISPLACEMENT (FLOAT OR HULL)—The total volume, or total weight, of water displaced by a seaplane float or hull.

DIVE—A steep descent, with or without power.

ARMY INSIGNIA NO. 7
The snarling panther that trademarks all craft of the U. S. Army Air Corps' 35th Pursuit Squadron.

DOCK—(1) A large shed used for housing airships. Also known as an airship dock. (2) To haul an airship into its dock.

DOPE (AIRPLANE)—A liquid material applied to fabric surfaces of airplanes, and tissue surfaces of model airplanes, to increase the strength of the material, to produce taughtness thus smoothing out wrinkles by shrinking and to act as a filler for maintaining airtightness. The latter refers to real aircraft only.

DOPE (FUEL)—Any material added to the fuel in small quantities for the purpose of preventing explosion.

Don't forget to watch for that lise of questions next week based upon the first section of this feature. And then watch further for the beginning of section 2.

Happy Landings!

Amos, Andy Switching To 7:45

By AIRCASTER

The history of radio has failed up to this time to reveal any instance of a commercial sponsor opposing himself on the air.

Yet, that very thing will eventuate when Amos 'n' Andy change their time on KDKA next Monday night by moving from the 7 o'clock spot to 7:45.

Simultaneously, on WCAE will be heard, as usual, "the rise of the Goldbergs," the sketch also sponsored by the firm which employs Amos 'n' Andy.

Amos 'n' Andy versus "The Goldbergs" will continue until the middle of July when both leave the air. Amos 'n' Andy are booked to return in September, and Gertrude Berg of "The Goldbergs" insists that her act also will be renewed.

What motives lie behind the simultaneous broadcasts constitute a mystery. Only the sponsor knows its solution, as well as he knows also that when two popular acts are thus counterpoised, one or the other is certain to lose a percentage of the audience.

And since it is conceded that Amos 'n' Andy, as time has shown, are invulnerable, we are left to draw our own conclusions as to the purpose of the change.

MTINTYRE, HEATH

Rudy Vallee found time to confide to me that in his eternal quest for new radio talent, he had succeeded in landing two "debutantes" who will make their radio bow on his broadcast next Thursday night at WCAE.

Each of these newcomers to the air is past 70 years of age. For four years they have been hiding away in Florida and Southampton, but now are planning to come out of their shells and appear in a new musical comedy.

In view of this, Mr. Vallee thought it would be an appropriate gesture to introduce them to the public by way of radio. The "debutantes" are not entirely unknown. They put their names down on the theater programs as McIntyre and Heath.

For more than half a century these gentlemen have done blackface comedy behind the footlights, but never yet have they faced a microphone.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

DAVID RENNINGER, whose application bears the address, 816 Locust street, Johnstown; LOUIS CROCCO, 1707 Mt. Joseph street, Carrick, and LOUIS MASTOCHI, Moltenauer.

* * *

AND don't forget that the Veterans' Hospital at Aspinwall needs cast-off silk and rayon stockings and underwear. Send it to the Globe Trotter.

Got a nice little letter today from Mrs. J. McT. She's delighted with the baby carriage which one of the Globe Trotters donated to me for distribution.

* * *

Now what I want is a little bed with springs for a poor little "kid" who has been sleeping on the floor.

* * *

A special compliment is due Elizabeth Brown, of Standard avenue, Pittsburgh, who followed the Globe-Trotter's suggestion of last year to keep a scrap book for all of the pictorial education series. Elizabeth has one that she can well be proud of.

* * *

Miss Mary M., of Weirton, W. Va., writes that she is a 16-year-old girl and would like to know where to get horse race tickets. She says that she has been lucky once and that she is always dreaming of numbers.

In the first place the tickets are part of a lottery and that's not so legal and in the second place many a resident of the poorhouse also had the same ability to pick winners.

Church at Corliss To Honor Pastor

Trinity Lutheran Church, Corliss, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ordination and installation of its pastor, the Rev. Charles H. Eisenbach, tomorrow. The Sunday school will hold a combined children's day and anniversary service at 11 a. m. The main service will be held at 3:15 p. m., with the Rev. Dr. W. E. Schramm, of Butler, preaching the sermon.

Our Family' on WCAE Tonight

The old saying that money is the root of all evil nearly proves true in "Our Family" dramatization from WCAE at 7 o'clock. The division of the money award for the capture of the criminal is a serious matter until settled by Lillian—in a few words.

Max Baer's Own Story of His Life and Loves

Gets Boxing Lesson From Loughran, Seeks Advice

MY LIFE AND LOVES
By MAX BAER
World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

CHAPTER XIII

The day after my fight with Ernie Schaaf the experts agreed on one thing—that I could take a pounding. After that the opinions differed, but most of them were different only as to what sort of adjective they should place before the word "bum."

However, the Garden thought I had done well enough to ge another trial, and offered me Tom Heeney.

I didn't play "hookey" training for that fight. Ancil allowed me a few days for skylarking after the Schaaf battle, and I took my little verbal banjo around to Dorothy's and sang songs, and she kidded me and asked if the great big bad man from California was going to knock out Heeney as he had knocked out Schaaf.

"Sounds familiar."

"How about marrying me?"

"Oh, we'll consider that later."

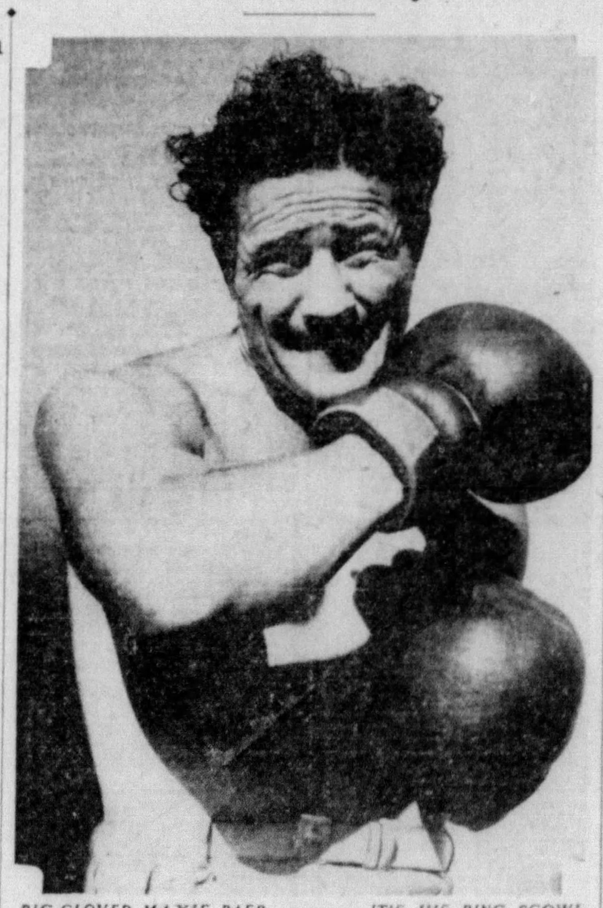
I put everything I had into my training, and I was in good shape when I met Heeney on January 16, 1931. He was a game fellow, but not hard to hit, and I scored a technical knockout over him in the third when he went through the ropes.

Gets a Shot at Loughran

The newspaper boys said I looked a little better, but needed about 20 more years of seasoning, which, fortunately, wasn't the Garden's idea at all, because the matchmaker offered Ancil another shot for me—either Johnny Risko or Tommy Loughran.

Ancil chose Loughran.

"How come?" I asked.



BIG-GLOVED MAXIE BAER. . . . IT'S HIS RING SCOWL

"Well, right now either one can pin your ears back, but I'm choosing Loughran because you can learn something by being beaten by him."

"Who says he'll whip me?"

"I do," answered Ancil. "Loughran is a very strange man. You could almost call him a freak. He has 575 left hands and the more remarkable thing about him is that he pumps all of them at the same time into other people's faces."

"When I clip him—"

Told to Learn Defense

Ancil is a great fellow. He never says much, but when he does he bangs the target. He never has stopped me from saying how good I am, but often he has joshed me.

"A couple of years from now," he said in 1931, "you'll wish you were only half as good then as you think you are now."

Another time he said:

"It would help you a lot if somebody busted your nose."

"How's that?" I asked.

"Because when a fellow's beezer is bashed in once, he hopes it'll never happen again. So he learns to protect his nose and, by so doing, he covers his jaw."

I read up a lot on Tommy Loughran, and asked plenty of people before I fought him just how good he was. They told me that if I hit him six times in 10 rounds I ought to get a Congressional medal.

The fight—let's see, now, was it a fight or just a bag-punching exhibition by Tommy—took place February 6, 1931.

What the boys said about Loughran was all true—too true. I think Ancil was a little shy on his figures when he said that Tommy had only 575 left hands. He hit me with more than that, and I nearly threw my right arm into the Hudson River swinging at him.

Asks Loughran for Aid

Along about the seventh I just quit trying to hit Tommy. It was a waste of effort. He made me look and act so much like an amateur that I just had to stop and laugh—not that crazy laugh, but a laugh such as a fellow uses who has tried his best, failed and isn't soured by failure. It was my salute to a better man.

I think I drove a few into Tommy's body, but I guess that was because Tommy was charitable and didn't want me to go 10 rounds without landing at least a couple of times.

After Tommy was given the decision he hurried to his dressing room. I trailed after him, and had to pass his room to get to mine. As I got opposite the door of his room I hooked onto an idea. I opened the door to Tommy's room, busted past the guard and took a hop-skip-and-jump at Tommy, who was sitting in a chair.

When he saw me dashing at him—well, was he surprised? But he didn't get up; just sat there watching me as I was charging at him, wagging my left arm.

I was poking the left in the way he poked his, but, of course, not quite so expertly—not quite.

"What's that?" asked Tommy, standing up and looking at me with a puzzled look.

"Listen," I said; "you hit me on the nose a thousand times tonight. I'd like to hit some other fellows' noses the same way. How about showing me?"

Tommy laughed. "Well, not now;; but I'll hook up with you at noon tomorrow, show you what I can, and then we'll have luncheon."

A swell fellow, that Tommy Loughran.

So Tommy and I had lunch together on February 7, 1931, and after that Tommy drilled me in the shooting of a left jab.

I got the idea all right—but not the technique.

"Some day you'll learn," said Tommy. "Keep on practicing and, all of a sudden, you'll click. It will become a natural act, just as natural as swinging the right. You should learn to shorten your punches, too. A fighter with half an eye can see them coming a mile away. Learn short punching, and you will be a hard man for anybody to whip from now on."

"Who's the best short puncher?"

"Jack Dempsey."

"Say," I yelled, "he's in town. I'll go over and see him and learn his stuff."

Notes of a New Yorker in California

SAN FRANCISCO: Alice Hughes dropped out of the skies just now . . . A breath from Manhattan she is—en route to the Orient . . . The same plane brought Ass't Sec'y of Labor McGrady, assigned by the President to mediate the local strike of longshoremen . . . Mayor Rossi's sec'y, Rapheld, brought the diplomat to see me . . . I trust matters are settled with the laboring lads amicably, and that when the strike ends—all concerned will be satisfied . . . It just rained a little here . . . They certainly are doing their best to make me feel as though it is New York, rain and everything, heheheh . . . You miss the rain in Los Angeles . . . When my visitors said they "just flew in" from New York—the postman walked in with the mail—which was winged via the same plane . . . It had been mailed 22 hours before! . . . In sum, I see what mail Ruth thinks is important enough, just as soon as though I were home, for I often avoid it for days.

Mack Gordon, who with Harry Revel, writes most of the nation's songs, usually forgets where he is—if a song idea or passage hits him. . . That is, Mack starts moving his lips or talks to himself, to phrase a lyric line or two. . . No matter if he's in the subway, a restaurant or hotel lobby. . . Revel, his composer, is a shy little chap, who blushes easily. . . Imagine then Revel's embarrassment last night as the three of us went up in the St. Francis elevator (there were some strangers in it, too) and Gordon, staring blankly at his composer, blurted out: "Honey, I'm so blue, all because of you!"

Followers of this column will recall how over a year ago, we first indicated the breach over at Curtis Dall's house—and that his wife, Anna Roosevelt, would soon tell it to a judge, etc. . . The first hint went this way: "That famous Washington family will have another divorce as soon as the current one is forgotten" . . Then, weeks later: "That Washington tribe's daughter has parted from her groom for good. The furniture of their upstate shack is now in a downtown New York storehouse."

Out here on the West Coast the visitor is startled when he observes a delivery truck speeding down the streets . . . The sides of it read: "This is driven by a blind man!" . . . I fell for it—but hard . . . The driver isn't blind, at all! . . . He is driving a truck for a manufacturer of blinds, or, as the intelligentsia would say: "window shades" . . . A letter came the other day from John Stein, who is preparing a book about Texas Guinan . . . John managed her affairs, and knows more about her career than any of us, I suspect . . . He said in part: "You must be in that book. Please tell me how you met Tex, when you met her—and your very first impression of her that stuck with you" . . . And I told him—that I met her at the El Fey Club on 48th street first—in 1924, I think . . . And that my first impression of her, an everlasting one, was that she went into a rage when a drunk playboy began using profanity in front of her girls . . . He was among the heaviest spenders in her club, too, but because he wouldn't quit cussing, she had him ejected . . . And he was forever barred from patronizing her rendezvous . . . I just learned, too, what hastened her end . . . Although she had done five performances on her first day here—she insisted on traveling dozens of miles with her troupe, to appear gratis at a show for sailors.

In response to the query recently: "How Tom Collins, the drink, was christened?" there have come numerous replies—chiefly from press agents . . . Who tag the submitted legends on to their clients . . . The exploiters, I thought, found out long ago, that the column can not be used in that manner . . . A New York attorney relates this unusual story . . . A young boy and girl were married two years ago . . . They kept it a secret, not even telling their folks. . . . A few weeks ago they decided to announce the wedding, so the lad went to his wife's father and confessed . . . The old gent replied: "That's fine!" then he added: "So you've been married two years—that makes you owe me two years' board for my daughter. You must pay me the money I paid out for her during the time you were married to her" . . . They boy didn't have it, he said, and anyway, he couldn't do it . . . The father went to the courts about it—and won!

What local reporters tell me—nobody thought of—until the Gettle case was over—was the fact that the small, green, corner stucco bungalow in La Crescenta (where the millionaire was held) was chosen with masterly judgment by the kidnapers . . . The house is surrounded on three sides by dwellings, that were vacated after being damaged by the disastrous floods a few months ago . . . While on the fourth side there is nothing but trees and woods . . . Anything could have happened in the snatch house, shots, screams, disorder of any kind, and no one would have heard it! . . . But what I started to report was this . . . Mr. Gettle, whose $60,000 ransom money was safely brought back to him—has been too busy at functions of all sorts, since landing on the front pages . . . While he sent a message of thanks to the police—via the press, he hasn't done so personally . . . Never heard of a rescued person yet, who ever sent his check, no matter how small, to any patrolman's benevolent fund, either.

This is also a true story . . . Last week there was a fire in the same building that tenants one of the most famous dance-halls on Broadway, in the 50s . . . The firemen arrived—there was much noise and smoke, etc. . . . All of which didn't disturb the dancers, at all . . . However, the firemen discovered that smoke was escaping up through the dance hall, and the chief assigned a pair of men with axes to investigate . . . The firemen broke into the room, and one of the women patrons, dancing with a gigolo, screamed: "My heavens! My husband!" and ran . . . Talk about coincidences!

'Thin Man' Thriller In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

The movie version of Dashiell Hammett's remarkable thriller, "The Thin Man," was unfolded in the Penn yesterday. It proved to be a faithful copy of the best-selling book—a melodrama with a tremendous punch and a lot of humor.

William Powell, as the debonair, hard-drinking Nick Charles, retired private detective who gets mixed up in a murder case against his will, has his best role for a long time. And how he plays it! Myrna Loy, as his wife, Nora, also gets the spirit of the thing. She is gay and curious and alive, and as near perfection in her role as Mr. Powell in his.

They are assisted ably by Nat Pendleton as Guild, the police detective; Minna Gombell, as Mimi, and Maureen O'Sullivan, as Mimi's daughter Dorothy. The minor characters are also well done, and to complete the cast there is a magnificent wire-hair, one of the finest actors we've ever seen.

The story, as thousands of readers know, concerns itself with a series of mysterious murders which involve an inventor, his rather goofy family, some hangers-on from the fast circles of New York, and several underworld figures.

The book is extremely hard-boiled, and full of Mr. Hammett's clever, clipped dialogue. The lines have been retained, insofar as compatible with the ideas of the censors. What is more important, the spirit has been retained, and the movie actually comes to life, as the book did.

Mr. Powell is as natural and at home as anyone could be, whether he is engaged in his incessant drinking, in frolicking with his odd companions, or in roughhousing with his beautiful wife. One scene, where he shoots balloons off the Christmas tree in his swank apartment-hotel with a toy gun, is delicious comedy, of the first order; and there are dozens of other sequences almost as amusing.

But comedy and atmosphere are not all the picture has to offer. The mystery itself is extremely well done. There are shivery moments, unexpected terrors, threats and perils, and clever detective work.

In these sequences, Director W. S. Van Dyke gets in some of his finest work. His use of shadows lends a tremendously chilling effect to the early part of the film, and later on he stages one long, creepy sequence in almost complete darkness.

We could go on like this indefinitely, because we thought "The Thin Man" was a perfectly swell picture. In fact, we thought the picture was just as good as the book, and Alexander Woollcott called that the best detective story ever written in America.

Go see it for yourself; you'll enjoy an exciting evening in which thrills and comedy are admirably mixed, and you'll see William Powell and Myrna Loy at their best, which is mighty good.

Ann Harding Martyr in Stanley

By KARL KRUG

Ann Harding is a long-suffering mother again in "The Life of Vergie Winters," which reached the Stanley yesterday. This talking screen translation of Louis Bromfield's novel is practically a cross between "Gallant Lady" and "Back Street," with a dash of "Frisco Jenny" thrown in to boot.

"The Life of Vergie Winters" is known in the parlance of the film industry as a "woman's picture," and if I may make so bold as to say so, the feminine element in the Stanley audience seemed to be enjoying itself mightily yesterday. Then, again, it may have been the cooling system.

The latest tenant of the Warners' key house is one of those flash-back affairs that begins in 1910 and ends in 1934, and it is my painful duty to report that Miss Harding's happy moments are very few and far between in those 24 years. Not only is the man she loves married to another woman, but their child is taken into his home to be nurtured and cherished by his lawful mate.

This, I fully realize, may be swell stuff for the ladies, and they go for it again and again without ever stopping to think how many times they have seen it before. In its atmospheric elements and production values, "The Life of Vergie Winters" is a thing to see and relish. Unstintingly photographed on a lavish scale, it is a perfect picture of life as it is no doubt lived in many small towns.

The village gossips are strikingly revealed, and the film brings home farcibly the fact that a Congressman from a small town has far more reason to watch his step where his love affairs on the side are concerned than does his fellow statesmen from those communities where everybody "doesn't know everybody else."

At any rate, John Boles is tricked into a marriage with another girl when he should have married Ann Harding, the village milliner. It is all explained very nicely as it moves along, this sub rosa romance between John and Ann, with each living only for those moments that they can spend in each other's arms. Mr. Boles is quite an old hand at this sort of thing, having done it on numerous occasions in the past, while Miss Harding received a preliminary training for her "Vergie Winters" role in "Gallant Lady."

It is in its sidelights that "The Life of Vergie Winters" shines brightest. There is Miss Molly O'Day, for instance, who makes a swell take-off on a small town vamp, and there is Creighton Chaney, son of the immortal Lon, who is excellent as one of the village boys enamored of Molly. The entire production is peopled with "types" surprisingly true to life, and Director Alfred Santell makes a clever use of newspaper first pages to denote the passage of time.

"The Life of Vergie Winters" is heavy screen drama, very dull in spots and very bright in others, but the tragedies Miss Harding has to bear for an entire score of years are pretty much of a strain on the imagination. That she never becomes embittered or resentful may be just another indication that the emancipation of women has reached surprising levels.

Camp Drama Hints In Book

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Another young Pittsburgher has joined the tribe of the authors by producing a book that fills a "long-felt want" both for summer campers and thespian amateurs. This time it is S. Sylvan Simon, who is a nephew of the late Sophie Irene Loeb and a cousin of the well-known screen star, Aline MacMahon, whose mother's name was Simon. If this geneology is not accurate, there is no doubt about the interest and value of his book, "Camp Theatricals," which has just been published by French.

Mr. Seibel

As dramatic instructor of a summer camp in the Adirondacks, young Simon gathered the experience and learned the tricks he has put into this book. He realizes the educational value of camp dramatics, especially in developing careful and proper enunciation, which in adolescence, the time of habit formation, is especially significant.

Simon's book covers everything from the construction of the curtain to the creation of the repertoire. If there is anything in the book that seems superfluous, it is some pages devoted to instructions on how to make tree stumps. In a summer camp it might be better to supply a list of plays with stumps in them.

One of the book's surprises is in the chapter on selecting the right play. If he did not tell us, who would believe that "The Last Mile" was ever presented in a children's camp?

There is a chapter on the amateur circus that is full of good ideas. Another chapter on marionettes is very fascinating. The ideas and illustrations on scene-building, on lighting, on make-up, and similar branches of the mimic art will be useful even to those who are not isolated in summer camps. In short, it's a useful and needed book.

All in a Day

Grins and Bitters

THE TWO men, reports Harry Jans, had been partners in a vaudeville act for some 30 years. But things grew very tough—and Bill told Joe that the partnership was over.

"It's no use, Joe," he said. "I can't go on any longer. We can't get work on the stage, so I'm quittin' the business. If you'll take my advice, you'll quit too."

"Not me," replied Joe emphatically. "I'm a trouper—and I'm goin' on troupin' until the day I die. Besides, how do I know any other line would be any better? Have you got a job in mind?"

Bill shook his head.

"Nope. But I'll find something all right. I'm energetic, I am. And it won't be long before I'll be doin' okay. Good luck to you, Joe. I'll be seein' you around."

It was some three months before the two men met again. Joe, who refused to quit the stage, was walking down a side street when he saw Bill. The latter man had on a white outfit, and was sweeping together a mass of garbage. The two ex-partners shook hands warmly

"It's good to see you again, Bill," cried Joe. "You're a sight for sore eyes—especially in that uniform. What kind of a job have you?"

"I'm a garbage collector," was the reply. "Working' for a private outfit, I am, and I only take care of certain neighborhoods." As he talked, he swept the garbage together in a neat pile. "It's not bad work at all when you get used to it. What are you doin', Joe?"

"Nothin'. Things are worse now than they were. I can't get any bookin' at all."

"Too bad," sympathized Bill as the garbage pile grew neater and neater. "I told you—but you wouldn't listen to me. I'm makin' my $14 a week, and I got no commissions to pay. I'm glad I quit the stage."

Joe was silent for a moment. Then—

"Say, Bill," he murmured, "as long as you're doin' so well, I wonder could you help a feller out? Could you spare me a buck?"

"Not a chance," returned Bill promptly. "I work hard for my money and I ain't givin' none of it away. I'm sorry, Joe, but there's nothin' doin'."

Joe clenched his fists. "Wouldn't give your old vaudeville partner a buck, eh?" he muttered. He looked around him, and his eyes fell upon the neat pile of garbage that Bill had assembled. He raised his foot and aimed a vigorous kick at the pile, scattering it in all directions.

"There you are,' he shouted vengefully. "Just for that, I've ruined your act?" . . .

I WAS gabbing with a group of Westerners the other night, and a San Francisco attorney remembered the story of Haircut Pete. Pete it seems, always patronized one restaurant in the old days; a restaurant that is long since gone.

Pete had two reasons for going to this restaurant. One was that the food was excellent. And the other was that, although the checks were paid at the door, the hustling waiters always wrote them out in pencil. Consequently, Pete would eat to his heart's content, accept his check, use an eraser, write in his own bill for coffee and rolls, and pay 10 cents to the cashier on his way out.

This went on for more than four years, with Pete eating a complete meal for 10 cents. Finally one noon his trick was discovered. And the manager asked him to get out and stay out.

Pete clapped his hat on his head and glared at the manager.

"Okay," he said. "I'll go. But I wanna take this opportunity to tell you that I never did like your food anyhow!" . . .

THIS is one of those episodes that could have happened only on Broadway. The other night, in one of the larger cabarets, a man was pacing nervously up and down the corridor in front of the ladies' room. A woman approached and, as she was about to open the door, the man spoke to her.

"Madame," he said, "we don't know each other and I want to apologize for speaking to you. This is not a flirtation, however. I am about to ask you to perform an errand of mercy.

"A few minutes ago, I socked my wife in the eye. She is now in the ladies' room, probably nursing the eye and crying. I cannot go in there. So will you deliver a message for me?

"Please tell her I love her, and that I'm terribly sorry I socked her in the eye. Tell her that I love her very much and that I apologize for my actions. Will you do that for me, madame?"

The woman, her eyes wide, nodded. She entered the room and closed the door. The young man resumed his pacing. Pretty soon, the door opened and another woman came out; a young woman with a badly swollen eye. The man strolled over to her, said something unintelligible and kissed her.

THE genial Billy Grady adopted son of Dinty Moore and expert talent detector for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, turned up the other afternoon with the bluest shirt ever glimpsed on Broadway. It was the bluest thing seen around our street since Mae West left for California.

"What's the idea, Billy?" someone asked. "Is that a new style?"

Motorcycle Thrills In Kennywood

One of the thrilling spectacles of the outdoor show world is Cimse's motorcycle act now in Kennywood. Four riders, three of them girls, drive a motorcycle at top speed over a two-foot track suspended 60 feet in the air. The climax comes when Rob Cimse, inventor of the device, drives it into three loop-the-loops. Burt Wyedner's Sylvanians open an engagement this afternoon in the dance pavilion. They will be at the dance floor all next week, too.

Roosevelt On Screen

President Roosevelt is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he reports to the nation on the work that has been accomplished during the 15 months that he has been at the head of the government. It is one of the most impressive talks delivered to the nation since the President assumed leadership.

First pictures of the triumph of the American woman's tennis team in the Wightman Cup matches come from Wimbledon, England. Members of the team are congratulated on their victory by Princess Helena Victoria, a cousin of King George. The Globe Trotter describes the match.

His imperial majesty, Kangte, of Manchukuo, reviews the military forces of his new kingdom for the first time since his enthronement. The review takes place in Hsinking airport.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules, it is possible some subjects of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Two Pictures Bill In Regent

A murder mystery laid in the Hollywood movie studios is the plot of "The Crime of Helen Stanley," one of the new talkies in the Regent, with the shooting of a screen star as she comes before the cameras as the starting link of the baffling story. The solution comes through the deductions of "Inspector Trent," portrayed by Ralph Bellamy. The crime is re-enacted to cause the murderer to break down and confess. Shirley Grey has the leading feminine role, and others in the cast are Gail Patrick, who plays the murdered star; Bradley Page and Kane Richmond. The other feature on the Regent's program is "Sensation Hunters," with Arline Judge and Preston Foster.

Hot From Hollywood

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 30.—In the grand old temperamental days of early Hollywood when the farfamed "yes man" first startled and then amused the outside world in general, the movie village directors gained publicity for themselves with certain idiosyncrasies.

The latest—and it probably reaches a new high in daffy routines—is the "directional stooge."

Some weeks ago RKO engaged Philip Moeller, who is noted in theatrical circles for his direction of Theater Guild productions, but it was not known at the time that he was such an intense artist. Much to the studio's amazement he was constantly in danger of injuring himself by sitting down where there was not chair to sit on!

To protect their interests and, naturally, Mr. Moeller, who is acting all over the place and showing Irene Dunne what to do in "The Age of Innocence," the studio bosses hired a chair-carrying stooge. The man does nothing but keep a chair under Mr. Moeller from morning till night!

U. S. AIMS BLOW AT COLLUSION IN BIDS

WASHINGTON, June 30 — (AP.)—A blow aimed by President Roosevelt at the phenomenon of identical bids for government orders is expected to have important effects on price-fixing under NRA.

Many interpreted it as a step away from rigid price-fixing. Hugh S. Johnson, however, was empowered to step in to prevent cut-throat competition.

The President, seeking keener rivalry for government contracts, issued an executive order yesterday permitting bidders to quote prices as much as 15 per cent below figures listed under Blue Eagle codes.

The lower prices then would have to be filed with code authorities, so as to become available to all citizens.

If Johnson feels the price-cutting is becoming destructive he can reduce the 15 per cent margin of competition to as low as 5 per cent. The margin applies to any government contracts—federal, state or municipal.

Critics of NRA's price-fixing policies have made much of identical bids submitted by Blue Eagle firms.

It was the second important relaxation yesterday in NRA's price policies. Another order dropped price-fixing and other fair practice provisions for the 55 service industries. These trades, employing millions, were offered blanket agreements concerning wages and hours and the way was left open for local codes of fair practice.

DARROW QUITS REVIEW BOARD

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Bitter internal strife in the National Recovery Review Board over its attacks on NRA caused the resignation yesterday of Clarence Darrow as chairman, it was learned last night.

Darrow, prodded by Charles Edward Russell, Socialist writer and "unofficial aide" to the board, wanted to make his third report to President Roosevelt such a sizzler that the other three members balked.

Finally, in a huff, Darrow agreed to their version of the report, took it to the White House and quit.

The board last night still was functioning technically with three of the original six members at work. However, it is expected they will resign in a few days.

Those remaining are: W. W. Neal, now chairman; Fred P. Mann, Sr., and H. O. Henry, secretary. W. O. Thompson quit after a tiff with Darrow on the second board report, and J. F. Sinclair dropped out as a result of Darrow's supplementary statement to the first report urging socialization of industry.

'Hands Off' Policy In Campaigns Merely Pose

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The White House is maintaining the pretense of impartiality in the Democratic primaries and congressional election contests only as an official pose.

On the inside, it is doing all the usual things, and even some unusual ones, to elect its friends and defeat its enemies.

That is an old game. All Presidents have realized that they may get their fingers burned if they start playing with local political matches. So they adopt the natural policy of avoiding official commitments while working very actively on the inside to attain the desired results.

President Roosevelt is proving himself wiser in that game, so far, than most of his predecessors.

METHOD

The President has found several ways of letting local voters know who his candidates are without indulging in open indorsements.

The latest example of that is in the handling of the Republican Progressive friends of the administration. You can write it down in your hat right now that Mr. Roosevelt will not openly indorse Senators La Follette, Cutting, et al., as long as they have Democratic opponents. He cannot do it because he would get into trouble with his local Democratic organizations.

His feeling is that the Republican Progressives are his friends. He would like to see them elected. He cannot openly indorse them as long as they are opposed by Democrats or by other Progressives who are also his friends.

All he can do is help them indirectly by inside pressure and by public hints—for instance, in the way he once patted Senator Tom Connolly on the back in a warm display of friendship before a number of Texas callers at the White House.

—OHIO—

The best example of the way the system works can be told by the inside story of what happened in Ohio during the last few days.

Democratic Governor White had announced as candidate for the Senate. All was quiet on the beautiful Ohio. Then ex-Governor Vic Donahey jumped into the race against White for the Democratic senatorial nomination. With only two days of filing time left, ex-Governor Cox, of Ohio, and Senator Bulkley held a few hasty conferences in and out of the White House here. Suddenly, Representative West flew out to Ohio and filed his name, making it a three-cornered race.

No one around the White House had said anything publicly and probably no one will, but you do not need a spyglass to see who the White House favors in that race.

REASONS

What happened on the inside in the Ohio situation from this end was this:

The administration was quite content to have Gov. White as the Democratic senatorial nominee, in the first place. There had been some talk about White's failure to release his delegation to Roosevelt earlier at the Chicago convention of 1932, but it was not serious. At least, Postmaster General Farley and the others swear that they harbored no ill feelings, and they seem to be sincere about that.

Two things made Farley and the White House political advisers decide to put West into the race. One was the fact that Mr. Donahey got in. Mr. Donahey's announcement of his condidacy contained an indorsement of the New Deal, but in rather general terms. At lease, Messrs. Farley, et al, thought the terms were too general and not quite enthusiastic enough.

The second thing was that certain influential Democratic authorities from Ohio came trooping into Washington (cumulatively during the last few months) whispering that White would not win the election if nominated. He had some difficulties as Governor which (they thought) had injured his vote-getting power.

Whether their views were accurate, they convinced the national administration crowd here that a strong administration candidate should be put into the race.

HINT

It will never get out publicly, but a few NRA leaders slipped up to the White House the other day and suggested that the President get a new NRA chief before he leaves for Hawaii.

Members of the group were not wholly unsympathetic with Gen. Johnson, but they have a feeling that he has overworked himself at the superhuman task he has been doing, and cannot be expected to give his calmest judgment to it now. They went away without a definite answer.

TIGHE DENIES CLOSED SHOP STEEL ISSUE

The closed shop has never been an issue in the steel labor controversy, but no agreements have been made with the government on this or other scores, President M. F. Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, said today.

Dispatches from Washington stated that the Amalgamated had made a definite promise to the government in a recent public statement that it would not ask for the closed shop even if its union was named as the majority choice for collective bargaining.

Tighe explained:

"We don't know what this labor board is going to do, or how they are going to do it. Until we do know there is nothing I can say on the matter.

"But the closed shop has never been the issue throughout this entire controversy."

TIN PAY MEET RECESSES

Conferences aimed at establishing a new wage scale between the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and the Western Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturing Association have ended here after a two-day session. Adjournment until July 10 was agreed to by both groups.

During the recess, manufacturers will consider proposals regarding wages and working conditions made at the April convention of the Amalgamated. When the meeting reconvenes, it is expected that they will make counter proposals to Michael F. Tighe, head of the union.

Brewing Company May Pay Dividends

Equity proceedings instituted against the Independent and Duquesne Brewing companies to secure a preliminary injunction restraining the latter from paying its preferred dividend July 2 has been dismissed in Common Pleas Court. L. F. Koenig, treasurer of the company, yesterday testified the organization's financial condition fully justified declaration of the dividend. The action was instituted by W. C. King, Jr., a bondholder.

TROLLEY, BUS STRIKE ENDS IN TRUCE

International News Service.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 30.—Street car and bus service gradually returned to normal schedule today under terms of a truce agreement ending the riotous four-day strike of Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company unions employes during which one man was killed and scores were injured.

Ratification of the nine-point peace agreement gave the three American Federation of Labor unions on strike an almost complete victory. The utility, deprived of its Blue Eagle, agreed to abide by the NRA in negotiating wages, hours and working conditions.

The settlement, proposed by Federal mediators, was accepted following a turbulent day and preceding nights of disorders. A high-tension powwer terminal was dynamited and a walkout of union workers last night at the Lakeside power plant left the cities of Racine and Kenosha and the southern half of Milwaukee in darkness for an hour.

Roosevelt Had Better Clip All Telephone Wires

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

See that Mr. Roosevelt has told his brain trusters not to crack wise or dumb while he is in Honolulu.

They are not to lecture, or entertain on the children's hour.

There is an awful temptation to pick up the office telephone while the boss is out to lunch. The President had better clip all the wires before he starts.

If he wants to get absolute silence, we can tip him off that the bandits get fine results with adhesive tape.

How about sending them back some ukuleles and compelling them to keep singing?

100 SHOTS FIRED IN FAYETTE MINE FEUD

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 30.—The mining village of Morrisstown, near here, was terrorized early today as warfare between rival mine union members broke out anew.

Residents took to their cellars as 100 shots were exchanged during a battle.

The firing began about 2 a. m., when snipers concealed in a cornfield blazed away at the home of Joseph Wargo. He is a member of the Miners' Independent Brotherhood, which has been waging a bitter fight with the United Mine Workers of America.

After 10 or 12 shots were exchanged the firing ceased. There was a period of tense quietness.

Suddenly the snipers blazed away again from the cornfield. Their barrage covered the approach of two automobiles to the Wargo home. From these machines a stream of bullets poured against the dwelling.

Stationed nearby since previous attacks on Wargo's home, state troopers rushed to the scene of the fighting. They captured 11 men in the two automobiles, seized a dozen rifles and some pistols.

Those arrested were brought to the state police barracks at Uniontown. They are Joe Verbanic, Jerry Griffin, Robert Smith, Felix Kirk, Frank Segeris, Joe Byers, Jamy Duggan, George Higner, James Forsythe, E. Bines and Donald Broadwater.

SEEK U. S. AID IN MINE STRIKE

P. T. Fagan, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, has requested a federal labor conciliator to aid in the settlement of the strike of employes of the Logan's Ferry mine of the Allegheny-Pittsburgh Coal Company.

The 500 miners, who walked out demanding the dismissal of C. E. Reynolds, mine superintendent, were urged by Fagan at a meeting in New Kensington Wednesday to return to work. Spokesmen of the strikers have indicated there will be no demonstration pending a reply from Washington.

LAWN CONCERT

For this concert Mr. Saudek chose two good orchestral numbers, from "Russlan and Ludmilla" and "Tannhaeuser," and for lighter music Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods," Chopin's "Military Polonaise," and Debussy's minuet and cortege from the "Petite Suite."

Caroline Hunt Mahaffey, contralto, was soloist and sang the big air from "Samson and Delilah," "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," and "Danny Boy."

TRAP SET IN MISSING BRIDE ROMANCE

Box after box of red roses, and finally a kiss that swept her off her feet and into a land of tragic romance—furnished the keynote of the preceding chapter of Winifred Van Duzer's story of Agnes Tufverson. Today's instalment brings Suzanne Ferrand, blonde and petite Parisian wife of Poderjay, into the picture. The trap is laid for Ivan and Agnes to be married and for Ivan to get possession of Agnes' fortune. And Ivan sails back to America.

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Author of "The Good Bad Girl," "Golden Roads," "Cardigan's Lovers," "Our Dancing Daughters" and Other Popular Serials.

CHAPTER III.

Why she began to talk over her affairs with Poderjay, Agnes Tufverson didn't know exactly. Perhaps it was because he told her so much of his own, and asked advice. He would say:

"You are clever. With you to think for me I, too, can have success."

"But you are successful, Ivan, besides you're a dealer in foreign exchange. I know nothing of that."

"All business you know by instinct. Yes, I have succeeded in my way. I have a house in London, a home in Vienna, an estate in Jugo-Slavia. My family is old and honored. There are also my investments. You know, I could make money for you."

But years of struggle had taught Agnes to be cautious about her savings.

SUBTLE EXCITEMENT

She was flattered by his admiration. Besides, she no longer had many to talk with. Her friends had met the captain and disliked him. Since he was always about they stayed away.

She didn't mind. There was a subtle excitement in her association with Poderjay that affected her, like a habit-forming drug. Qualities which had revolted her at first she now saw as merely European mannerisms. Even the suggestion of effeminateness she regarded as part of his charm; a touch of the Oriental, perhaps, handed down through some Magyar ancestor.

On a night in late autumn he told her he was leaving for London.

"But Ivan—surely you'll come back?"

She felt as if the earth were falling from beneath her feet.

"There's an investment—a fortune involved. You wish me to come back, Agnes?"

"Yes."

No longer suave in that moment of departure he seized her in his arms.

SCENE SHIFTS TO LONDON

London—November fog—A neat little apartment in Bayswater—A woman at a breakfast table.

She was diminutive, dainty, very blonde, but without a hint of feminine appeal. Her hair was close-cropped as a man's. Even her negligee was severely tailored.

She raised eyes like twin points of blue ice and regarded without surprise and with no sign of welcome the man who had burst in upon her.

"Ah, Ivan! You are not an inviting figure."

Disheveled and haggard, he faced her with an odd mixture of dog-like devotion and abject fear. He cried:

"I haven't slept the whole passage in my eagerness to see you, Suzanne."

Her smile was chill as sun on Arctic wastes.

"And the rich American—you have married her?"

"That old wagon! I am married to you, Suzanne."

"What nonsense! You are married to Suzanne Ferrand, of Paris, and to Mme. Shivka, of Belgrade, and almost to another, who lives in Copenhagen. And to how many more, my wayward one?"

"But I love you!"

"Love! What is that without money?"

She rose suddenly and came close to him.

"You will return at once to New York and do as I command. Then we will speak of love!"

PERHAPS IT WAS LOVE

Perhaps it was love of a sort that Poderjay felt for the woman at whose feet he cowered, pleading with the courage of desperation, his voice taking on the thin edge of hysteria. She watched with her cryptic smile, her face above the austere negligee as classic and unyielding as a statue's.

But in the end Suzanne relented a trifle. The marriage? She cared nothing for that. It would be prudent. But perhaps the riches might be acquired without the marriage?

Poderjay muttered "Perhaps," and cabled Agnes Tufverson. A marvelous investment — if she would send him much money he would return her much more—

But Agnes felt no lure in the prospect of quick wealth. Her answer threw him into fury. Always smiling, Suzanne observed him trample the yellow paper to shreds. She said, softly:

"The die is cast, my friend."

Sullen and desperate, he sailed for America.

Monday's chapter of this thrilling life drama will reveal how Poderjay and Agnes planned their dream home abroad, on Agnes' money—a dream that was never to come true for Agnes.

Association Women Plan Vacations

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

According to Miss Margaret Sheppard, publicity chairman for the American Association of University Women, the minds of Pittsburgh members will not be occupied with local and world problems this summer. Instead, travel and rest are to be their chief concern.

Mrs. Carl Glock plans to spend the summer at "Waubashene," her cottage on Lake Erie, near Geneva, O., with her son, Carl, Jr., and her daughter, Anne. Miss Ruth Fugh, who is chairman of the fellowship fund and also served as chairman of the summer pop concert committee, will go to Lake Chautauqua for a much-deserved rest.

Another member, Miss Virginia Ray, chairman of the membership committee, has a particularly interesting summer before her. With Miss Mary Alice Bright, Miss Helen Booth and Miss Betty Mendenhall, she is sailing today on the Franconia to spend the summer in England and France. The girls have planned to rent a car in London and drive through the Scott country, the Trossachs and Edinborough. In London they will stay at Crosby Hall and in Paris at Reid Hall, both of which are clubhouses maintained by the A. A. U. W.

Mrs. George Ellis Jones, but recently returned from Poughkeepsie, where the association's sectional conference was held, will be with Mr. Jones at their cottage on Van Buren Point, N. Y. Mrs. Victor Saudek, another member, and Mr. Saudek plan to visit several Eastern coast resorts after mid-August. Miss Jewel Palmer is returning to her former home in Columbia, Mo., where the State University, the oldest west of the Mississippi, is celebrating its ninety-fifth anniversary tomorrow.

Mrs. J. Howard Dice, president of the association, and her husband will spend the summer at North East, Pa., where they have taken a cottage and will be neighbors to Mrs. W. M. Parrish, last year's president of the Pittsburgh branch. Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall Longdon and Mrs. J. Smith Miller are sailing Thursday for a cruise to Cuba, Jamaica and Spanish Honduras, on which they will be accompanied by Mrs. Longdon's daughter, Mrs. Harry E. Simmons, and Miss Dorothy Replogle, both of Johnstown, who will join them in New York.

Miss Mary Louise Succop has already started her summer travels, having left yesterday for New York. She will spend some time in Russia. Mrs. Stephen J. Tracey is home from a week's visit in Palisaides, N. J.; Miss Clara A. Scott and her sister, Mrs. Mary S. Maurer, and her son, Herryman Maurer, will motor to Nantucket and spend the summer there and Miss Kathryn and Miss Helen Faragher will vacation in Indian Head, Md. Mrs. Frederick B. Chalfant is studying at the University of Chicago and Miss Sara Ellis is en route to San Francisco for the summer.

Musical-Tea Given For Miss Foster

Mrs. C. E. Foster gave a musical-tea in her home in Idlewild street yesterday afternoon for her daughter, Miss Betty Foster, who sang three groups of songs, English, German and Italian and French. Miss Foster wore a charming afternoon frock of white lace with a corsage of roses.

PIRATES BATTLE BRUINS IN SILVER JUBILEE GAME

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Forbes Field on Gridiron. Tech Students Open Way. Penn Game Gives Idea. • Yankees Baffle Bonura. Baer Suits Continue. Cleanup by California.

Back in 1908, a group of Carnegie Tech students spotted what they thought would make a pretty good football field. They set about putting it in condition for gridiron games, spent many an hour carrying stones off the big lot, and in general worked tirelessly to make the grounds safe and presentable. They had their reward when the possession of a home field made it possible for Carnegie Tech to get a football game that fall with the University of Pennsylvania team, a cancellation by Swarthmore having left the Quakers with an open date in their schedule.

Honus Wagner

The first big eastern eleven ever to appear in Pittsburgh, Penn came here on Saturday, October 31, 1908, with Sol Metzger as coach and Bill Hollenback as captain, and defeated Carnegie on the new gridiron, 25 to 0. Owing to the hurried preparations, the setting naturally was on the makeshift order. It was just a temporary arrangement, and the only seats were wooden bleachers. But a glance at the layout gave the late Barney Dreyfuss an idea. Wouldn't that be a good spot for a major league baseball park, a new home for the mighty Honus Wagner, then the talk of the nation, and his Pirate mates?

FORBES FIELD BUILT ON TECH'S GRIDIRON

It meant a venturesome step and the taking of a daring chance on the investment of a fortune, but the owner of the Pittsburgh club quickly put the idea into execution. He purchased about seven acres of the land. The wooden bleachers came down and up went a massive structure of concrete and steel to create Forbes Field and give the country its second modern ball park, the owners of the A's having constructed the first in Philadelphia. And on June 30, 1909, the Pirates moved in from Exposition Park to open a new era in Pittsburgh baseball.

That was how Forbes Field came to be built, and on the occasion of its Silver Jubilee, the thoughts of many former Carnegie Tech students go back to the days when they lugged stones off the site to see if the place could be made into a acceptable spot for college football. They didn't dream at that time that they were opening the way for the magnificent park that has just completed a quarter century as one of the wonders of the baseball world.

NO HOMERS FOR BONURA AGAINST YANKS

Though Zeke Bonura, White Sox first baseman, has established himself as one of the new candidates for home run honors in the American League, he probably would be far back among the trailers if he had to bat against the Yankee pitchers all season. Zeke has found no cousins among Joe McCarthy's chuckers. His home run record against them for the campaign to date is exactly zero. The Chisox clouter has looked at Yankee pitching in 10 games so far without getting anything that looked like a four-baser.

Zeke Bonura

BAER'S OLD PILOT STILL FIGHTS FOR CUT

While Max Baer is being toasted throughout the country as a great fighter, a sprig of laurel might well be tossed in the direction of one of his former managers in recognition of his unusual qualities in the same respect. J. Hamilton Lorimer, who used to be Maxie's pilot, and for that matter still claims to be, in a legal sense, is no mean battler himself. In fact, he has been doing a great deal more fighting than Baer, but has confined his activities to the courts.

Lorimer's aim is to collect a slice of Baer's earnings. He asserts that under the terms of his old contract as manager of the fighter who has since become heavyweight champion of the world, he still holds a 25 per cent interest in the clouting clown, and he has brought one suit after another in an attempt to get a cut. Lorimer, it is said, was offered $40,000 to relinquish his claims against the champion's bankroll, but refused, alleging that Baer and Ancil Hoffman, Max's present pilot, owe him $90,000 on past fights alone. It has cost Lorimer $20,000 in attorney's fees to carry on the fight for one-fourth of Baer's intake during the last few years.

BREAKING CALIFORNIA'S TITLE MONOPOLY

When Gilbert Hunt, Massachusetts Tech tennis player, eliminated Jack Tidball, U. C. L. A. defending champion, from the national intercollegiate title tournament on Thursday, and Tony Canzoneri on the same day took away from Frankie Klick, of San Francisco, the right to challenge Barney Ross for the lightweight fistic crown, the victorious performers caused the first break in an amazing chain of California successes that had threatened to give the Golden State a corner on sports honors.

Jack Tidball

Lawson Little, of Stanford, captured the British amateur golf championship. Olin Dutra, of Los Angeles and Santa Monica, picked off the United States open in the same sport. A team of seven Stanford track men came East and won the I. C. 4-A crown in a field of hundreds of competitors. A week ago they repeated to win the N. C. A. A. title in Los Angeles. Max Baer, of Livermore, dethroned Primo Carnera as world heavyweight ring champion. The University of California creew took first honors in the Poughkeepsie regatta. Ben Eastman, of Stanford, ran a half mile in 1:49.8 to smash the world record. Ellsworth Vines turned pro in tennis and defeated Bill Tilden in a series of matches. Helen Jacobs is the reigning women's tennis champion and headed the team that retained the Wightman Cup. Lester Stoefen won a place on the United States Davis Cup tennis team, and Jack Tidball grabbed the eastern intercollegiate tennis championship before falling in the national. Gene Mako, U. of S. C., may be at Hunt in the final for the national net title which slipped away from Tidball, and Stanford's track men may land additional honors in the A. A. U. meet in Milwaukee, concluding today. It begins to look as though the only titles safe from California [illegible] are big league baseball, big league hockey and America's Cup yachting.

TROLLEY DODGERS AND THE GIANTS DIVIDE

HONUS WAGNER, A STAR THEN . . . NOW HE'S COACH

Honus Wagner is back in the game with his old club as a coach. Back in 1909 he was the best shortstop in the game and a mighty slugger. The Pirates defeated the Detroit Tigers in the world series during the first year of tenancy at their new park, after having spent their early years at Exposition Park, on the North Side. Barney Dreyfuss, the owner, who conceived and built the dream park, died a few years ago. Reproduction of the box score of Forbes Field's first game is from the scrap book collection of James J. Long, sports columnist of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and the rain check of the opening game has been preserved through the years by Edward F. Powers, of 145 Amabelle, street, Mt. Washington, still a hot Pirate rooter. He is employed by the Board of Education.

LEADERS HAIL BUCS' JUBILEE CELEBRATION

By John A. Heydler, President of the National League

I deem it a great pleasure to be among those present at the Silver Jubilee of Forbes Field, and to place a National League wreath on the memorial erected in honor of Barney and Sam Dreyfuss. The great ball park stands as a fitting testimonial to the man who sponsored it. He was a master builder.

By John K. Tener, Former President of the National League

How do I feel on the twenty-fifth anniversary of Forbes Field? Great! And, if you don't think so, just have Pie Traynor ask me to jump into a uniform to face those pesky Cubs from Chicago. I feel I can go nine innings!

It was the old Chicago Nationals of the 1880s who gave me a chance to see whether I was a major league pitcher.

Naturally I have a deep interest in all Chicago clubs, but my home-town loyalty belongs right out there at Forbes Field.

Pittsburgh has come into its own in baseball ever since the day Barney Dreyfuss brought his club here. Mr. Dreyfuss gave the city consistently good baseball, and his successor, William E. Benswanger, appears to be following in his footsteps.

Forbes Field still remains the prettiest ball park in the country. It is a credit to the man who erected it and is one of the show places of Pittsburgh.

The present squad of Pirates is a snappy outfit. They have plenty of speed and punch and a fine brand of team play; in fact, I cannot see why they should not win the flag.

I predict big days for our national game. It is the greatest of all sports and is bound to prosper.

By Mrs. Barney Dreyfuss, Chairman of the Board of the Pirates

It is keenly regrettable that my husband could not live to witness the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of Forbes Field, which stands as a permanent monument to him.

By W. E. Benswanger, President of the Pirates

It is easy to ride along with a comfortable tide, but the test of sportsmanship is when the tide ebbs. In 1909, Mr. Barney Dreyfuss had the courage, vision, foresight and an unbounded confidence in the national game sufficient to make heavy capital investment in the face of opposition. His faith was more than vindicated the first day.

In 1918, when the war was on

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: CALENDAR CASTLE—Augustusburg Castle, built between 1568 and 1572, is situated about five miles from Chemnitz, Saxony. It was erected at the order of Elector August 1, who entrusted the job to a non-professional, Jerome Lotter, the Mayor of Leipzig. In the sixteenth century, every Saxon city executive was entitled to the honorary appellation of "architect," and that is the reason why the Mayor undertook the work.

The Silver Jubilee doings were popping at Forbes Field today, but it wasn't likely the twenty-fifth anniversary game would bring as much exciting baseball as that on display at the Oakland Orchard yesterday, when the Cubs and Pirates staged one of the most unusual contests in the history of the Dreyfuss park. A violent storm stopped the action in the eighth inning with the teams tied at 8-all. The tie game will be played off at Forbes Field as a part of a doubleheader Wednesday, August 8.

The Jubilee contest of this afternoon will bring together on the slab a pair of young and stalwart pitchers. Southpaw Ralph Birkofer will flip 'em for the Pirates, who will look at the swift slants of big Bill Lee, a sensation with the Columbus club last year. Various ceremonies will precede the game, which will be started at 3 o'clock. The series will close with a single game tomorrow.

LINDY ON BENCH

Fred Lindstrom may have to play a bench role. The splintered finger which kept Fred on the bench for almost a month suffered a bad reaction while Lindy was taking batting practice yesterday. He was unable to play, so Woody Jensen went to the left plot.

The Pirates yesterday accomplished a feat which seldom has been surpassed in baseball. Before the storm broke, the Oaklanders actually drove three of Lefty Grimm's aces off the slab and they had his fourth ace hanging onto the ropes as the game was called.

Pat Malone, Charley Root, Lonnie Warneke and Guy Bush were the slab luminaries who felt the strange sensation of taking the route to the showers in remarkable succession. And it was not a case of moving the pitchers for pinchhitters—the aces were shelled right off Fogarty Knoll.

A fighting Irishman named Tom Padden delivered the dramatic punch of the game a moment before the deluge. In an instant, Tom stole second and was ready to prance home with the winning run on a possible single when Manager Grimm and his players kicked up such a fuss about the darkness they were able to stave

PEGGY SCRIVEN DEFEATS CAROLIN BABCOCK AT WIMBLEDON

HELEN, JACOBS SARAH PALFREY IN VICTORIES

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30.—(AP.)—Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey, America's leading women entrants in the English tennis championships, today advanced to the quarter-final round with straight-set victories over high ranking players of France and Poland, respectively.

Miss Jacobs, American champion and top-seeded favorite, defeated Jacqueline Goldschmidt, fourth ranking French girl, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Palfrey won from J. Jedrzejowska, first ranking Polish woman, 6-2, 6-2.

The weather was almost insufferably hot as the seventh day of Wimbledon play opened, but the largest attendance of the tournament, an estimated 20,000, pushed its way into the stands to see the ranking American women play.

DOROTHY ROUND WINS

Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, the defending titlists in women's duobles, had a walkover into the third round when the German combination of Cilli Aussem and Frau M. Horn defaulted. Miss Horn is ill.

Dorothy Round, second ranking English player, joined the two American women and Cilli Aussem and Mme. Mathieu, who won their places yesterday, in the quarter-final round with a three set triumph over Mrs. Phyliss Mudford King, former English Wightman Cup star, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

MISS BABCOCK BEATEN

Carolin Babcock, the third American entry in women's singles, was put out in the fourth round by Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, first ranking Englishwoman and conqueror of Miss Jacobs in the French title final, 9-7, 6-8, 6-2.

PIRATES, CUBS PLAY TO TIE

off impending disaster until the cloudburst made the quick decision. Play could not be resumed after the rain ceased.

The great Lonnie Warneke carried a two-run advantage into the eighth as the clouds made ready to give forth their burden. Gus Suhr smacked Lonnie for a hot single and Cookie Lavagetto's was just as hot. Lonnie followed the Malone-Root trek to the showers and Bush rushed to the scene.

Mississippi Abe has been pitching about as well as any twirler in the league, but he could not prevent a sacrifice by Jensen which put the tying run in the scoring zone.

The darkness was beginning to envelop the field as Bush pitched to Padden, whose attitude indicated he would drive in those runs or bust. Tom spanked a hot one over third which caromed sharply off Stan Hack's glove into left and the two runs went over.

Up to this moment the Pirates had been trailing the Bruins, but the savage drive of the Pittsburghers compensated for the looseness of their own staff which is not supposed to be as keen as Grimm's corps.

Padden took advantage of the excitement to swipe second. Red Lucas, a dangerous hitter, was up there to drive over the run if he could. He had one ball and one strike when Manager Grimm dashed from the Chicago dugout and asked for a recount. Lefty contended it was too dark. He was overruled by Umpire Pfirman, but Bush then appealed to Umpire Klem. The umpires were ready to call a halt when the rain spoiled things entirely.

GABBY HITS HOMER

Leo Hartnett's twelfth homer of the season came in the third with two on the sacks and after Lavagetto's fumble had spoiled the third out of the round. The three tallies were added to two made by the Cubs in the first frame. The Bucs scored a run in the first and added two more in the third.

Four Chicago hits lead to three tallies in the fifth, but the Pirates scored twice in the sixth

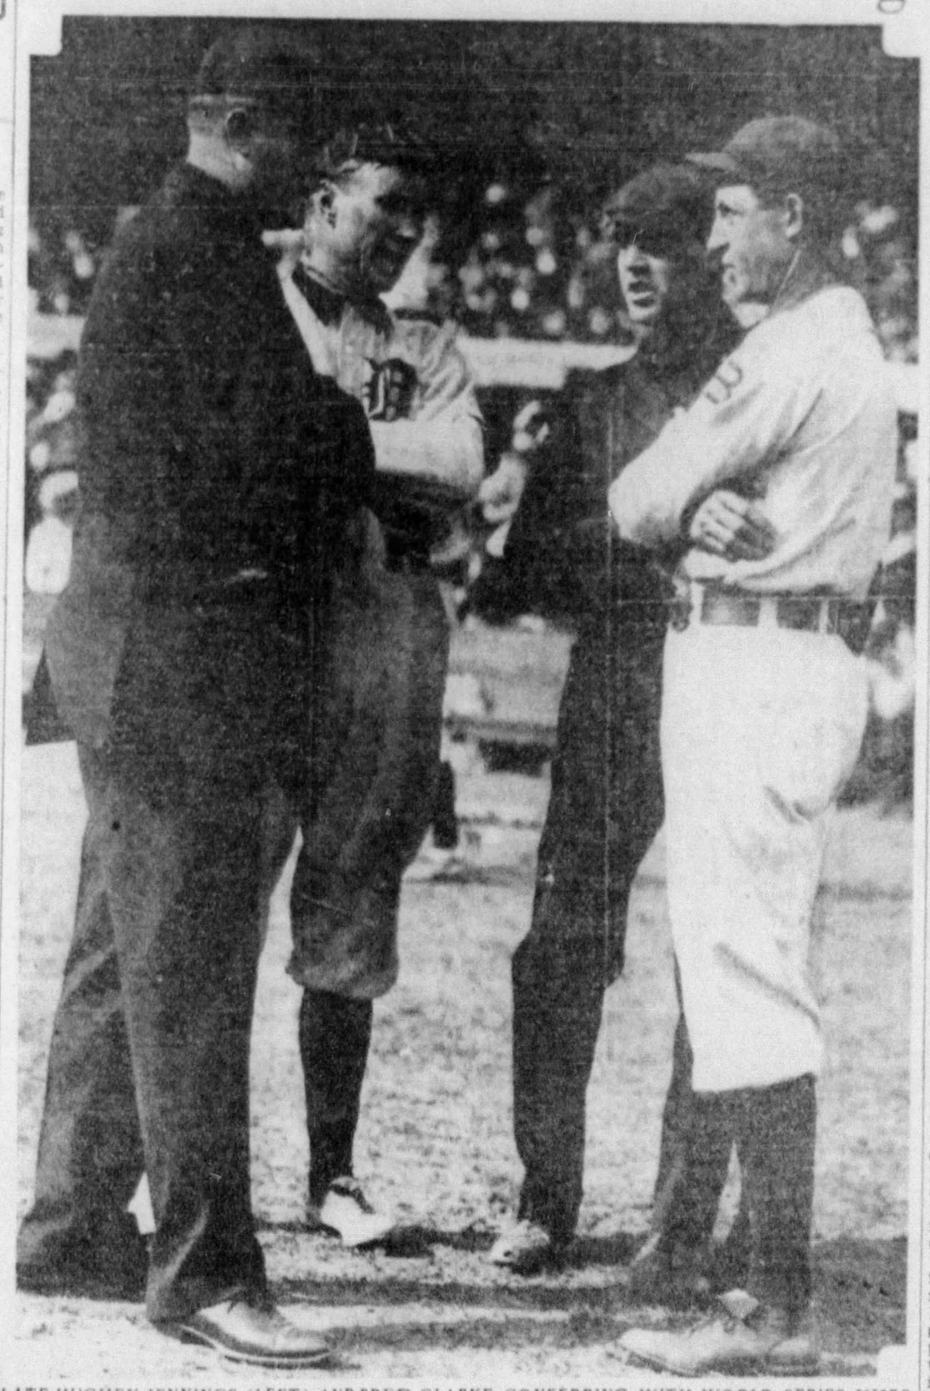
When Forbes Field Was Young



LATE HUGHEY JENNINGS (LEFT) AND FRED CLARKE CONFERRING WITH WORLD SERIES UMPS

A reminder from the 1909 world series between the Pirates and Detroit Tigers, which the Pirates won to make their first year at Forbes Field a big success. Today the local club celebrates the Silver Jubilee of Forbes Field with appropriate ceremonies scheduled.

SENIOR MEET ON TODAY

MILWAUKEE, June 30.—(AP.)—America's greatest athletes, including 26 Olympians, 22 defending champions, a dozen record holders, will wind up a two-day carnival today with the senior championships of the American outdoor track and field at Marquette University stadium.

With 11 records already written into the books as the result of sensational competition in the junior division last night, a wholesale smashing of records is expected this afternoon, with the field the greatest in the 47 years of A. A. U. competition.

The outstanding performers include Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette Negro super-sprinter, in the 100 and 200-meter races; Glenn Cunningham, William Bonthron and Gene Venzke, three of the greatest milers of all time in the 1,500-meter run, and Ben Eastman and Charley Hornbostel meeting in the 800-meter race.

Cunningham and Bonthron will be meeting for the fifth time this year, with the score two victories apiece. Metcalfe, up against the fastest field since the Olympic games, has won the American 100 and 200-meter races two years in succession and is determined to repeat.

LOCAL STARS IN MEET

John Deni, Tony Mazzei, Bob Evans, E. Muscovich and Howard Spencer are Pittsburgh district entries in the National A. A. U. championship track and field meet which is being concluded in Milwaukee today. Deni is in the 3,000-meter walk, Mazzei in the 10,000-meter run, Evans in the 400-meter senior and junior hurdles, Muscovich in the discus throw and Spencer in the senior high jump.

Evans placed fourth in the finals of the 40-meter hurdle event last night in the junior competition. He won his qualifying heat in 57 seconds.

Deni finished third in the junior 5,000-meter walk, won last night by John Ruban, of Detroit.

Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

I have been asked: Is walking good for a person? I should say it is. Of course, riding in an automobile is much easier, but if you must walk I suggest you get away from the house early so that you can walk to the ball park before the game starts. Kidding aside, I think walking is good sport for the health, but remember I'm no doctor and if you are thinking of going in for walking in a big way you'd better ask your doctor if your constitution is o.k. Look at what walking does for policemen. Did you ever see a weak cop?

LEADERS HAIL BUC JUBILEE

and players were serving in the Army and Navy, faith and perseverance were sorely tested and it appeared that baseball would be a permanent loser. But again Mr. Dreyfuss rose to the occasion and almost alone among baseball men prepared for the future on a bigger scale than in the past.

Once again his keen judgment was correct.

Now, in these trying times it becomes apparent that the same faith, vision, judgment and sportsmanship are needed to make the future of the game rosier than its past.

The Pittsburgh Baseball Club is devoted to the promotion of major league baseball and in furnishing the public with the best talent available. This spirit will be continued. The support of the public and press is appreciated and it shall be our aim to merit their continuance.

By Samuel E. Watters,
Vice President of the Pirates.

Twenty-five years ago! ! !
Somebody must be wrong! ! !

Why it seems just a short while back since Bill Gardner and I walked out through the gates at the Forbes Field opener and made an unsuccessful effort to land a ride back downtown.

The few automobiles on the streets on that midsummer day of 1909, must have scared all the horses away, for we could not even hire a buggy to get back.

Well, I guess the calendars do not lie. But I can understand why Rip Van Winkle must have thought he was waking up from a good night's sleep.

Forbes Field has lost many a night's sleep for yours truly, yet I would not exchange it for all the ball parks of the land.

I remember standing on the field and looking into the barren reaches of empty seats after the masons and structural iron workers had completed their mammoth task.

Barney Dreyfuss, the man whose vision and courage made our beautiful park possible, was standing nearby. He broke the quiet to remark:

"I hope to see the day when this pretty park is filled with baseball fans."

And a few days later we opened to an overflow throng.

My association with Mr. and Mrs. Dreyfuss, their son, Samuel, and the present president of the club, William E. Benswanger, has been a big part of my life.

White Meets Yates For College Title

CLEVELAND, June 30.—(AP.)—Ed White, of Texas, champion of the Southwest Conference, and Charley Yates, of Georgia Tech, chase par 72 across Country Club's fairways today for the national intercollegiate golf championship.

Yates entered the finals by soundly trouncing his teammate, Frank Ridley, 7 and 6, in a good-nature, one-sided match.

White's victory in the semi-finals turned back the last Northern contender, Charles Kocsis, of Michigan, the Big Ten champion, one up.

COTTON TAKES BRITISH OPEN, MISSES MARK

SANDWICH, England, June 30.—(AP.)—Although he faltered badly down the home stretch and failed to shatter the tournament scoring record, which had appeared within his grasp, Henry Cotton coasted through to an easy victory in the British open golf championship, triumphing with a 72-hole total of 283 and breaking a 10-year American stranglehold on the title.

Battered by a biting wind and buffeted by a boisterous crowd of 5,000 stampeding fellow-countrymen in the final round, the 27-year-old British professional went to pieces yesterday for a stretch of 12 holes, threatening to blow a 10-shot lead he had amassed from previous great rounds of 67, 65, 72 over the Royal St. Georges' par 72 course.

DARKHORSE SECOND

Standing on the fourteenth tee with disaster staring him in the face, Cotton took a new grip on himself and finished the remaining five holes in par for a fourth round 79, enabling him to breeze in with five strokes to spare over Sid Brews, a darkhorse South African professional, who put together rounds of 76, 71, 70, 71 for 288 and runner-up honors.

Third place went to Alf Padgham, 1933 British Ryder Cup team player, who had rounds of 75 and 74 today for a total of 290.

TIE FOR THIRD

MacDonald Smith and Joe Kirkwood, two of the four pro invaders from the United States, finished in a tie with Marcel Dallemange, French pro, for third place with 292.

The other two entries from the United States, Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, and Gene Sarazen, of New York, finished in that order, 18 and 19 shots, respectively, behind Cotton. Starting the final day 11 strokes off the pace, Shute, defending the title he won last year after a playoff, lost eight strokes more on the third round, taking an 80, and he didn't do much better on his final tour, carding a 78 for 301.

Hopelessly out of it at the opening of the morning round, Sarazen scored a 74, falling behind by 18 strokes, and he lost more ground in the afternoon when he posted an 80, giving him a grand total of 302 and getting him just inside the money-winning circle. Buried down the list with the same total was Jack McLean, the Scottish amateur, who finished first among the simon-pures.

Fanciful Names Given Outboard Racing Craft

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Drivers of motorboats in the big regattas go in for fanciful names for their craft, judging from some of the boats which have been entered in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup meet to be held in conjunction with the Oakmont Boat Club at Oakmont two weeks from today and tomorrow.

Quitcherbellyachin is the most humorous title so far entered. It is the label of the Class B boat of George M. Weaver, of Beaver Falls, in the amateur class.

THREE 'BEARCAT' BOATS

Johnny Edgar, of Troy, O., will bring three boats here, the Bearcat Nos. IV, V and VI, and, according to Wink Neeley, of New Kensington, district amateur driver, they are "bearcats" in fact as well as in name. Edgar is a professional and was one of the contestants in the international races at Miami, Fla., last winter.

Among other boats entered are: Blue Demon I, Flash, Buckaroo, Star Dust, Bottoms Up, Miss Niagara Falls, Oakmont Flier, Mercury, Miss Shuffle, Casey and Pepper Dust.

COURSE RESURVEYED

Arrell Reinking, of Indianapolis, a professional, and Jim Nunnelly, of Detroit, an amateur, are two other racers who will appear here after having raced in the Florida classic.

The Oakmont course will be resurveyed and prepared for the races today by Chief Surveyor E. J. Winkelman. An expensive instrument which will be used, it is said, will make the mile-and-a-quarter oval exact to within a quarter of an inch.

Jimmy Altman, well known amateur driver, of New Kensington, is among the latest entrants. Bob Campbell is another entrant from New Kensington. The former will race in the B, C and F classes and the latter in the amateur B class.

ILLINOIS DRIVER IN

The latest out-of-town entrant is Jim Rodgers, of Melrose Park, Ill., who will race in the professional C and F classes.

Tomorrow there is a doubleheader with the first game starting at 2:45 o'clock. The final game is scheduled for Monday evening.

With the series with Nashville out of the way the Crawfords have to tangle with the Homestead Grays with the City Negro championship involved. There will be two games July 4.

Jackson's Return Causes Trouble

Birmingham, Ala., June 30.—(INS.)—The jinx that has dogged the footsteps of Shoeless Joe Jackson since he was barred from organized baseball in the 1919 world series scandal has popped up again like a ghost that cannot be laid.

Jackson, now a portly barbecue stand tender at Greenville, S. C., has been engaged to manage the Eufaula club of the Dixie Amateur League, and the step has caused a controversy to flare that threatens to blow the league wide open.

Jackson is scheduled to report for duty Monday, but other members of the league have refused flatly to play with a club managed by the disbarred former big league player.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—(AP.)—Anne Townsend, of Philadelphia, revived during intermission after complaining of the heat, defeated the defending champion, Mrs. Delloyd Thompson, of Washington, Pa., 3-6, 6-1, 6-2 yesterday for the singles title of the Maryland state women's tennis tournament.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Woman of Today Doesn't Need News Censor

NEWS that INTERESTS WOMEN . . . Someone writes and asks me why I don't cover such a column once a week at least . . . This sister wants to be directed; she wants to know just what the highlights are for her own sex . . .

She says she has read the papers ever since she can remember . . . She used to pour over the news in the days when cable cars plied Penn avenue, and her daughter and daughter's daughters do the same thing . . .

And its this last generation she worries about. Too much RED news these days. Too many a trangulations and kidnapings and long drawn-out discussions upon whether Europe should pay up, and be done with it. Or start again, borrowing.

Miss Brunot

GOOD IDEA IN THEORY

But there's the beautiful movie star, killed when on the highroad from a party; the five babies all born at once, and offered a crib at the World's Fair; the thespian who has lived peacefully with his wife 50 years; the fact that King Carl has reigned in Rumania for four whole years and not had a bullet in him. (That's news for the women, that king who has had such heart affairs, who has done what he pleased; and still been king); the cabinet member's wife who was chosen the best dressed woman on the Riviera; the steel tribulation and the chance of strikes, think of the army of sisters who's husbands wouldn't be bringing in the pay envelope if all those men walked out and of the changes it would make in such homes.

Oh, yes, there is plenty of news for the women . . . And not even looking at the social columns . . . Not even reading what is good for the baby when she breaks out in hives . . . Not even noticing whether it takes two or three hours to roast young lamb . . .

INTERESTED IN EVERYTHING

The trouble is, sister, women are interested in everything. They have their fingers in all sorts of pies . . . We aren't at home on the top shelf any more . . . We're in the arena, and have thrown our hats straight into the ring . . .

So, grandma, the younger generation will keep on reading. They won't stand for expurgation . . . They'll do their own thinking . . . They'll either be aping the wrongdoer or criticising him . . . They'll either be all for Dillinger, or decide the world well rid of him . . . They'll either be all-in-all devoted to Einstein, or Mary Pickford, or Jimmy Walker, or Mrs. Roosevelt . . . And neither you nor I can stop it . . .

This isn't an obedient age . . . This isn't a tranquil period when the old ladies sit and doze and are brought their spectacles and knitting by the sweet young graduate . . . Even the average grandma is at the beauty parlor chasing off the wrinkles . . . and climbing into the rumble seat to show she still has agility . . .

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW

And the newspapers keep coming out, seven star editions of them . . . And each one of them chuck full of comedy and tragedy, and adventure . . . We may use them later on for lining the bread box and laying over the freshly scrubbed floors . . . Yet even when we're doing this, our eyes traverse something NEW . . . What one may be wearing in Paris . . . What the Duke of York looked like when a baby . . . That Douglas Fairbanks wears a monocle . . . And on we go, dusting and baking and THINKING . . .

On we go riding over rolling roads, and out along the Fox Chapel pass or the tunnel to the South Side . . . On we go, playing tennis, or swimming in the Allegheny . . . Or gathering apples in the country . . . On we go, planning and tending to our rock garden, or washing the dog . . .

Yet your minds are working . . . That's what this age has done for women . . .

WE THINK FOR OURSELVES . . .

Whether we're 70 or 17 . . .

Each one of us can SELECT our OWN NEWS . . .

We don't need any BOSTONIANS to do our BANNING . . .

Miss America Goes to Chicago's World's Fair---No. 1 By Nell Brinkley

Why, to the Chicago World's Fair!" said they. "To see the wonders of the Century of Progress. To gaze at the fountains in the electrical court playing in light that was kindled by a beam from the star, Arcturus. We always did think Arcturus a romantic star!

"We want to see Paris transplanted—cafes, shows, lampposts, French signs and all. To walk down the avenue of flags. To see the Belgian village, the Romanoff treasures—the solid gold Easter eggs, priceless enamels, bejeweled gifts of one Russian royalty to another, both the Czar and the Czarina who gave them in nameless graves.

"We want to see the Golden Door of Memory, to travel in a Sky-Car with the blue lakes and the modernistic city, sprung out of another great city, below us. To chase boredom and ignorance with all the amusements and exhibitions that the great lake city of modern men could think of!

"We are traveling in a somewhat used but very durable roadster of uncertain parentage, but of a willingness that would delight you. She has four wheels and a two-girl top, and her name is Cleopatra!

"We, Susan and Salina—Sue and Sally for short—and Cleopatra—Cleo for short—are all agog and a-twitter. You'll be hearing from us!"

Sue debated the baggage and planned the budget, while Sally kicked up her slipper heels and wondered if maybe a love affair might lie in wait somewhere along the road. Maybe REAL love, who could tell!

Katie Takes Interest in Hunt

I had been able to control my voice and facial muscles before my mother-in-law so that she, aged and infirm, should not guess my panic over the disappearance of Junior and Roderick. But I could carry my poise no farther. Safe from her scrutiny, with the door of her room closed behind me, I was able to meet Hugh's news only by a despairing, almost wailing echo of his words.

"Gone! Their bicycles gone? Oh! what does it mean?"

Lillian's hand was instantly upon my arm, gripping it firmly, and her voice was peremptory as she addressed Hugh.

"Do you mean that they've been stolen?"

"We don't know yet," Hugh said. "Jim told me that they weren't in the place where the boys usually keep them, and I came up at once to tell you. I left Jim going through every place where the boys might have left them, while Katie—"

LOOKING FOR TRACKS

Hugh and I came quickly to her side, and I saw with amazement that my little maid, flashlight in hand, and bent nearly double, was going crabwise along the pathway to the gate, carefully scrutinizing the ground.

"That's what I was about to tell you," Hugh said, and there was that in his voice which told me that he was repressing amusement at Katie's antics. "Katie is looking for the tracks of the bicycles, to see which way they went."

"What's wrong with that?" Lillian demanded a bit truculently. "It's what somebody ought to do, and even if she is a little bit spectacular in the doing of it, I'll back her to find any tracks if they've there."

"So will I," I commented tremulously, for there long has been distinct respect mingled with my amusement at Katie's ambitions to be a "detecatiff," and her assiduous study of the "correspondence course in detecting," for which she has paid out a goodly sum of her wages.

For I have had several rather spectacular proofs that my little maid is possessed of an almost uncanny aptitude for running down facts and ferreting out covered trails in the conduct of people who, for some reason or other, need watching. That she is able to get results in spite of her "correspondence course," instead of because of it, does not detract from the value of her findings.

With a sudden impetuous movement I turned from the window.

"What are we standing here for?" I asked. "I'm going down to find my boy."

"Of course you shall," Lillian said soothingly, "but you'll do better work if you take three minutes to change into something suited to the outdoors."

I had completely forgotten my bathrobe and slippers, the costume in which I had dashed down the hall to summon Hugh and my father when I first had discovered the absence of Junior and Roderick from their beds. Furious, I found myself flushing, not at the costume, but at the recollection of the look on Avis Arlen's eyes when she had opened her door into the hall, where Hugh had caught and steadied me as I swerved and almost fell in my terror at the inexplicable disappearance of my small son and his cousin.

DRESSES FOR SEARCH

I did not dare to look openly at Hugh, as, with a stammered "All right" to Lillian, I fled past them to the door of my own room. But a quick, furtive glance from under my lowered eyelashes showed his face absolutely calm, as he stood with Lillian watching Katie through the window.

Relieved, I hurried on into my own room and dashed, fireman-like, into a suit, shoes and stockings suitable for a tramp along the country roads. When I came back to the corridor I was almost within the three minutes Lillian had named, and she gave me an approving glance.

"Good work!" she said. "Now you run along with Hugh and forget everything here. With Marion to help me, I'll take care of the baby and keep the home fires burning against your return. Good hunting!"

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Down Three for a Top

"Too bad, partner; I'll give up these bad Jump Overcalls."

Thus one of the Bridge experts competing in the Individual Masters' event at Crockford's Club, New York, recently apologized to his partner at the end of what he thought was a disastrous hand. So disappointed was he with the run of high cards played by his opponents, including four trump tricks in the suit which he had chosen as a Jump Overcall, that he did not observe what was apparent to his partner, the very well satisfied Dummy, that at small cost he had saved a vulnerable game. However, if the defense had not slipped, his sacrifice would have been too great.

The Jump Overcall, when opponents (and particularly vulnerable opponents) have opened the bidding, is a very strong defensive weapon. However, it should imply at least a fairly strong trump suit. The success of this defensive bid on the hand below with a very weak, though long, trump suit is not a justification for its use under similar circumstances. However, it did succeed in preventing a game in this particular instance, and gave to its maker a good score. He had, of course, two chances to win with the bid: One was that the call might obstruct the bidding of his opponents to such an extent that they would not reach the right contract; the other was that if his partner had but little and he was doubled, the adversaries had a game, and if the price was reasonable for preventing it, then he could afford to pay it. A third factor—not negligible even among experts—was that the defense might slop a trick, and that is exactly what happened.

West, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 10 9 4 ♡ K J 6 5 4 2 ◇ 5 ♣ K 9 6
♠ A J ♡ 7 3 ◇ K 9 7 4 ♣ A Q J 3 2	North West East South	♠ Q 7 6 5 ♡ A Q 10 9 ◇ Q J ♣ 10 8 4
	♠ K 8 3 2 ♡ 8 ◇ A 10 8 6 3 2 ♣ 7 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	2 ♡ (1)	Double (2)	Pass
Pass (3)	Pass (4)

1—Fearing that opponents have a game and desperately trying to prevent them from bidding it.

2—East sees what appears to be four certain trump tricks. His partner has opened the bidding, which should account for at least three tricks more, and East also has some strength besides his trumps.

3—West rightly reasons that East must have strong hearts, and the set can easily be more than the value of game, which from the East hand is strongly problematic.

The play of the hand the defense was not as alert as it might have been. Careful defense can hold North to four tricks—thre trumps and a club. Actually, the East player shifted to spades at one stage of the proceedings. This enabled North, by simply ducking twice in Dummy, to set up and cash one spade trick before East had a chance to get any discards, and while North still had a trump left to regain the lead.

A four-trick set, or 700 points, would have given East and West a top score, inasmuch as the normal result on the basis of Duplicate scoring was plus 600, 640 or 670 for East and West, depending upon the amount of tricks the Declarer could win at a contract of three notrump. With the bad defense North escaped with a three-trick set—a loss of 450 points—and as a result was rewarded with a top score for his rather doubtful overbid.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Erysipelas Is no Longer Common

Few are aware of the great advances which have been made in the treatment and prevention of infectious diseases. Shortly after the war between the states, Lord Joseph Lister, an English physician, advocated the necessity of what we now call "surgical cleanliness." His theories, although revolutionary, were fortunately accepted. They resulted in a great reduction in the numbers of serious fatal infections which are commonly encountered in homes, hospitals and public institutions.

Dr. Copeland

Prior to the days of Dr. Lister, and for some time after, erysipelas was a common and often fatal infection. In those days the disease was spoken of as "St. Anthony's fire," and little hope could be offered its victims. In most instances serious and even fatal complications occurred. The dreaded disease annually took a dreadful toll of lives.

Today the disease is less frequently seen. This can only be explained by our increased knowledge of infection and our ability to prevent it. In addition, medical science now offers special methods of treatment that aid in combating the disease and reducing the danger of complications.

Cold compresses of gauze saturated in a solution of magnesium sulphate, give relief from the burning pain. At times a 10 to 20 per cent strength of ichthyol ointment is beneficial.

Another aid is painting the skin beyond the border of the lesion with tincture of iodine or a strong solution of silver nitrate. This is believed to stop the advance of the infection.

I am letting you know about these methods of treatment because of some emergency which may demand immediate care. But, of course, your doctor must see the patient as soon as possible.

Perhaps the greatest advancement in the treatment of this disease, as well as its prevention, is the use of "erysipelas streptococcus antitoxin." This serum with the big name is obtained by immunizing horses against the poisons or toxins of the erysipelas germ. Then the fluid part of the blood is used to prepare the serum.

With care erysipelas can be avoided. Never neglect an injury of the skin. Bear in mind that a scratch, laceration or tear of the skin permits dirt and bacteria to enter and set up an infection. Proper hygiene of the skin prevents this and minimizes the danger of erysipelas and other skin disorders.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. V. R. Q.—What causes the lips to quiver when I laugh? I am nervous, would it be due to this?

A.—The quivering of your lips is probably due to the nervous condition. You should be treated by a nerve specialist.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Notes of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please instruct me as to writing a note of thanks for a gift my husband and I received? We had quite a bit of hard luck (lost our home and child) and some friends in the town where we use to live sent us money. Now the thing is, it will be impossible to thank each one, as there are too many, and I haven't the time, so I thought perhaps you would be kind enough to help me. The note would have to be rather plain, everyday English, as we are all the same . . . none very well educated, when it comes to expressing ourselves. I do hope you will try to understand me. I don't want them to think it was made up for me by someone else.

READER.

What kind friends there are in this world, and how generous these friends of yours have been to you and to your husband. It is an inspiration to hear of such good deeds.

I would like so much to have you write a separate letter of thanks to each friend who so generously contributed to this gift. After all, each one contributed separately, and therefore deserves an individual note. Perhaps there are "too many," as you say, but that you "haven't the time" . . . honestly, haven't you the time to be grateful for such a wonderful gift as each one made? Think this over, please.

Dear Mrs. North:

I cannot begin to tell you how much my husband and I thank you for your wonderful generosity in contributing to the gift of money sent to us. The money was a lifesaver, and our hearts are full of gratitude that there are such friends in the world as you. Blessings on you for your great kindness, and our deepest thanks to you, always.

Most sincerely,

Another Chance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I recently attended a dance with a young man friend . . . which dance he attends weekly, and always stays for the last dance. This was the first time he had taken me, and I asked him to take me home an hour early. He pretended not to mind but I know he was very disappointed and I'm sure he'll not ask me to go again. Was it incorrect of me to ask him to take me home early? If so, what should I do to alter the situation? F.

Since the girl or woman has the prerogative of suggesting what time she wishes to leave a party, it was proper for you to say that you wanted to go home. On the other hand, there is the question of friendly adaptation to what we know are the other person's wishes. Apparently you knew that the young man liked to dance so much that he always stayed through the party. If you had some special reason for wishing to go home early . . . well and good. But if you were only being a bit selfish in doing what YOU wanted to regardless of your partner's wishes, you were within your social rights but your weren't being very co-operative or unselfish. And your partner was very polite about it, I think.

I write especially feelingly about this, I suppose, because, like your partner, I hate to leave a dance until the last strains of "Home Sweet Home" are insistent! And, like him, I'd be "very disappointed," and have a difficult time "pretending not to mind."

Now what to do? If he carries his disappointment to the point of not coming to see you for what you think is too long a time, then you might plan to have a small party at your home and invite him . . . even one table of bridge might do as an "excuse." It's an old, old ruse, but it often works! I don't believe there is much point in apologizing or in even mentioning your problem to him—just hope for another chance.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

No matter how many pairs of evening shoes you possess, there is always room for another pair. A new model has a baby slipper strap around the ankle and cut-out toes. It is of gold-flecked white satin.

Invitation to the dance means a suitable frock. Cool and lovely is an ensemble of printed black and white net. The dress is worn over a white taffeta slip and the jacket has white taffeta revers and a tailored white taffeta belt. Nice for daylight dancing and dining.

Be angelic in a lovely white outfit. A delightful vacation coat is of white waffle pique with narrow pleating outlining the wide shawl collar and the semi-circular pockets. It fastens with a self-belt and buckle.

Sometimes it is cool by the sea at night and then a wrap that is warm is called for. A beautiful wrap is of pale green velvet that hangs straight from the throat line. Cuffs of summer ermine band the short, full sleeves and there is a tiny ermine bow under the chin.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

No external treatment will remove white spots from the finger nails. No need to worry; Mister Time will get rid of them. They are caused by injury to the matrix, so keep metal instruments away from the base of the nail. When lifting the cuticle with an orange wood stick be gentle. Prepare the tissues by soaking in warm soap suds, dipping in a saucer of warm olive oil.

Hair growing is a popular pastime now that the high coiffure threatens to return. It has been away a long, long time; it will be welcome. Curls along the nape line will cover bristly ends. As soon as they are long enough they should be taken to the permanent wave operator and have a boiling. Then they can be brushed upward under the longer hair. The high hairdress is precisely that and the average woman will have to grow about five inches of hair before she can wear it. Locks are swept up at the back, with the crown of the head covered with ringlets. No, my dear paper friends, there will be no rest from ringlets. They are a care, but they are heavenly.

Raspberry red is a fashionable color. If you select it for a frock, better get a lipstick to match. With that new baltic blue, a rather vivid shade, make-up must be subdued, complexion powder a deep ivory.

Tobacco brown is friendly to vermillion lips, and so is black. Of course, one can't match always just to the robe, but it must be kept in mind, just the same.

With all pastel shades it is wise to soft pedal on rouge and lipstick, though eye shadows can play a bit wild. We're getting makeup down to brass tacks these days. Results are satisfying.

There are women who carry the head slightly lowered, chinning toward the chest. It is a bad habit. What it does to upset the beauty cart is plenty.

With the head lowered, shoulders fall forward and the backbone cannot carry on as it should. Lift chin, hold head erect, hoist up the chest, hold the spinal column tall and you have an entirely different type of woman, a gal who looks spirited, highly energized and courageous.

BANK REFORM UNFINISHED BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The question of banking reform in the United States remains unfinished business.

The Banking Act of 1933, the Securities Act and the Securities Exchange Act need to be co-ordinated and implemented.

Mr. Rukeyser

Basic questions of banking, including unification, deposit guaranty, and participation by commercial banks in true underwriting are still to be definitely dealt with.

A commission of practical men and technical experts ought to be appointed during the congressional recess to review the whole subject of improving the banking situation and codifying the laws.

SAYS BANKS EMACIATED

H. Parker Willis, Columbia University authority on banking, who two years ago acted as counsel to the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, in a book just published entitled, "The Banking Situation," in presenting his conclusions, says:

"The provisions of the banking act of 1933 are likely to be helpful as far as they go, but they do not go far.

"Complete reorganization of the banking laws is needed in order to eliminate all contradictory and uneconomic or obsolete provisions, and to install such amendments and changes as seem requisite.

"Among such amendments should be included provisions designed to make banking a profession to be conducted only by men of probity and experience."

Dr. Willis, first secretary of the Federal Reserve Board, thinks that our central banking system has been emaciated by the recent trend of events:

"The transfer of central banking powers under the act of January 30, 1934, to the Treasury has paved the way for the further weakening of the Federal Reserve System, already weakened by earlier events.

WARNS MEMBERS

"The Federal Reserve System itself has become 'frozen' and is unable to resist, by the usual money market methods the disorganization of American finance growing out of the plan of filling the banks with illiquid government obligations.

"In these circumstances, the banking system is passing through a time of critical emergency from which it may emerge either as a government system, or as a greatly weakened privately-owned system."

Dr. Willis also warned against asset deterioration by member banks.

Business recovery of course tends to reverse the process and bring upon widespread improvement of bank assets.

Anglers in State Await Dawn of Bass Season

HARRISBURG, June 30.—(INS.)—Barring heavy weekend thunderstorms, Pennsylvania anglers can expect favorable conditions for the opening of the bass season next Monday, the Fish Commission announced today.

Water is rapidly clearing in some streams and others already are clear, according to reports from the field. Most of the streams were reported low enough to make fly fishing extremely alluring.

Many followers of Izaak Walton probably will be on hand to troll for wall-eyed pike and Susquehanna salmon in the Juniata, the Susquehanna's north branch and the Allegheny, according to the commission.

EMPLOYMENT, WAGES, HOLD INTEREST

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 30.—Employment and payroll figures are now much interest, since there are still some 10,000,000 persons out of work, and one great object of the "recovery efforts" is still to create employment.

The Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that in May factory employment was practically stationary (with a gain of 0.1 of a per cent), while payrolls fell a little, being off 0.3 of a per cent.

Evidently, therefore, manufacturing contributed little toward putting our people back to work, and actually reduced total wage payments.

One reason for this may be seen in the following facts: (1) Between May, 1933, and May, this year, the total factory output increased only about 10 per cent, and prices of manufactured goods averaged about 16 per cent higher. (2) But in the same period, factory employment increased 31 per cent and total payrolls were 57 per cent higher.

Clearly, manufacturers could not long go ahead increasing employment and payrolls two or three times as fast as they would increase their production or selling prices. After all, as long as we rely on private enterprise to employ labor, we must allow such enterprise something for profits.

WAGES UP

Another point worth noting is that average weekly earnings of factory laborers probably increased only about 10 per cent during the year ended in May. (That is the exact figure for Mass

STOCKS DRIFT IN QUIET MARKET

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP.)—Stocks failed to develop any definite trend in the early dealings today. Gains and losses were widely mixed, but changes were of a fractional variety.

United States Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas, Westinghouse, American Tobacco B and United Aircraft eased while American Telephone, Dome Mines, Nash, New York Central and American Smelting pushed ahead slightly.

With industrial operations undergoing seasonal curtailment, Wall street anticipated further price reductions in various lines to stimulate lagging demand. Reductions in prices of some steel products were pointed to as symptomatic.

A further NRA retreat from price-fixing, in connection with bidding on government contracts, was approved in financial quarters which contend a flexible price structure is necessary to economic health.

Recent price reductions on automobiles have been effective in reviving retail demand. Cram reported the trend of passenger car sales continued well above recent expectations. In anticipation of sustained retail demand, according to Cram, and a let-down in schedules next week over the Fourth of July, motor production this week recorded a sharp increase, rising to 80,936 units, an increase of 10,606 and 21,298 larger than in the like 1933 week.

The dollar was firm against foreign exchanges in early trading. The British pound opened at $5.04⅜, off ⅛ of a cent. French francs were 0.00⅝ of a cent lower at 6.59⅛ cents.

BEARISH NEWS HURTS GRAINS

CHICAGO, June 30.—Following an irregular start, grain prices turned downward early today. Moisture and cooler weather both in spring wheat territory and over the corn belt had a bearshi effect.

Opening ⅜ off to ⅜ up, September 90¾-⅞, wheat soon sagged all around. Corn started ⅜ lower to ½ higher, and subsequently underwent a general dip.

Weekly Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP.)—Bank clearings continue on a rather restricted basis at some centers, and now are smaller than for any full week since early in the year. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,375,407,000, which was 8.4 per cent below that of a year ago. In the same comparison a week earlier there was a gain of 0.5 per cent. Clearings at New York City were $2,861,579,000, a loss of 17.3 per cent, while the aggregate of $1,513,828,000 for all outside centers was higher by 15.2 per cent.

The unusual activity in the speculative markets at this time a year ago, especially in stock trading at New York City, swelled bank settlements then—hence the loss shown there in this year's report. Clearings this week are $1,204,879,000 below those for the preceding week. Some decline for the fourth week of June is not unusual; for the same two weeks last year, the reduction was $779,054,000.

A number of outside centers continue to show large gains, among these being Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Atlanta, Louisville, New Orleans, Dallas, San Francisco and Portland.

DROP IN STEEL OPERATIONS LOOMS

By E. V. LUTY

A perpendicular drop in shipments of finished steel products occurs over tomorrow. Today is the last day for making shipments against contracts for bars, shapes, plates, sheets, strips, wire products and tubular goods made prior to the advances of last April. Shipments have been very heavy this week while next week shipments will be confined almost wholly to tin plate, rails and steel for identified construction jobs, as such steel is exempt from the June 30 deadline.

Production of finished steel has been decreasing for a few days as mills allowed themselves some leeway, to make sure they could complete shipments.

Production of steel ingots began to decrease last week, as various periods of time elapse from the ingot to the finished products. A revised estimate puts last week's ingot production at 55 per cent of capacity while this week may be estimated at 42 per cent, the week opening at 45 per cent with production off sharply yesterday and today.

Mill operations next week will be particularly light because the week is split in the middle by a universally observed holiday. Some mills will run up to the holiday only, some only after the holiday and some will be closed all week. Operations in the following week will not furnish a safe criterion as to the general pace because some business will accumulate while mills are idle.

SEPTEMBER GAIN SEEN

The common view is that ingot production in the entire month of July will average more than 30 per cent of capacity and less than 40 per cent, with August averaging a few percentage points above July and September bringing a substantial improvement.

Reduced prices have been filed with the American Iron and Steel Institute on hot rolled strips and several descriptions of sheets, eliminating part of the April advances. The mills that filed the new prices name July 7 as the effective date. The revised code permits other mills to meet such reduced prices without taking the full 10 days' time for their own filing.

The April advances and the present reductions are as follows per net ton: Hot rolled sheets, 10 gauge, $5, $3; 24 gauge, $8, $4; cold rolled sheets, 10 gauge, $5, $1; 20 gauge, $8, $4; hot rolled strips, $5, $3. Thus, for instance, the net advance on ordinary 24-gauge sheets is $4 a ton. No new prices have been filed on galvanized sheets or cold rolled strips.

While all mills concurred in the April advances there were some who thought the advances were too great for a single operation.

The automobile industry has been doing better in the last few weeks than was expected and as only two makers have stocked steel to any extent a moderate demand while buyers who have stocked sheets and strips will profit less than expected they will still have some advantage. Merchant steel bars were advanced $3 a ton in April and are now reduced $2 a ton, so that only a dollar a ton is saved by stocking.

CONSTRUCTION SLOW

mand is expected in July from that quarter. Movement of tin plate, rails and steel for identified construction jobs is not affected. Tin plate has a seasonal slipping, however, while little rail tonnage will be left after next month. On the other hand steel for construction work appears to be increasing slowly.

Production of steel ingots in the year ending today has totaled slightly over 30,000,000 tons, and this will be the high total for 12 consecutive months for several months, as this month's production is well above that of last June and next month will be far below last July. The smallest total for 12 consecutive months was for the period endir with March, 1933, about 12,000,000 tons.

The scrap market has remained altogether inactive but as mills have liquidated stocks thoroughly it is thought they may soon begin to restock. Heavy melting steel scrap has been quotable at $11.50 to $12 for more than a month.

SLAYING LINKED TO YAWL THEFT

SCITUATE, Mass., June 30.—(AP.)—The body of a slain man lay on an exposed mud flat off Scituate.

Nearby was moored the 40-foot yawl Cumberbunce, pirated last Saturday as it lay at its dock in New London, Conn.

The Cumberbunce was chartered by a group of students from Mrs. Margaret Love, of Malden. They sailed her to New London, where they attended the Harvard-Yale crew races last Friday, and docked her while watching the regatta.

Duncan Perkins, one of the students, was held up as he boarded her early Saturday. He ran from the dock as the piratical stranger brandished a revolver, and when he returned with police, the yawl and the stranger had disappeared.

MAIMED WOMAN HURT IN FIRE

Abed with a broken leg, Mrs. Agnes Keller, 60, of Riddle Run road, Springdale, broke her leg in a second place today in a hasty attempt to escape from her burning home. She fell from the bed to the floor. Her son, Charles, carried her to safety.

The blaze, which is under investigation by Fire Marshal Thomas Pfarr, caused only $5 damage, Pfarr said that inner tubes filled with gasoline and a five-gallon can of gasoline were found beside the house.

The owner of the dwelling is said to live in McKeesport.

NO. 181.

AN ORDINANCE—An ordinance relating to safeguarding public health, prescribing certain rules, regulations and requirements in any building now existing or which may be erected, or altered, to make, or dispense any beverage or prepare any food for consumption on the premises or elsewhere, or in any building where the public may assemble, such as places of amusement, dance halls, theaters, etc., and providing penalties for violation thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That for the purpose of enforcing requirements of the laws and regulations relating to plumbing and drainage or any nuisance that would affect the public health, the Plumbing Inspector shall be permitted to enter any house or building, ground or premises, in the City of Pittsburgh at all times and where nuisances that would affect public health exist, he shall notify or cause to be notified the owner, agent or occupant of the ground or premises in which such violations or nuisances shall be found to occur, remove or abate the same in the manner prescribed by the Act of General Assembly approved June 7, 1901, and May 14, 1909, before installing or plumbing or drainage any building which now exists or may hereafter be erected or altered, which purpose is to make or prepare or dispense any beverage or prepare any foods either for consumption on the premises or elsewhere, it will be necessary for plumbers to comply with SECTIONS 4 and 5 of the State Plumbing Law.

SECTION 2. Every drain opening on soda fountain, lunch counter or beer work board must be furnished with a trap which shall be placed as close as possible to the fixture it serves, for which a fee of 50c for each fixture must be paid. Within the meaning of this ordinance the term "fixture" is defined to mean bottle cooler, refrigerator, rinsing sinks, glass washers, etc. All such drains must not connect directly with any part of the plumbing system but must discharge over a properly trapped and vented water supplied sink or receptor.

SIZE OF TRAP AND WASTE PIPE

Each outlet must be furnished with not less than a 1½" trap. One to two fixtures having 1½" traps under each will be permitted on a 1½" waste pipe; three to eight traps permitted on 2" waste pipe; nine to twenty on 2½" waste pipe.

Changes in directions must be made with 1/8 or 1/4 "Y" branches, or one-eighth bend fittings where possible. Extra heavy cast iron, copper, brass or galvanized recessed iron pipe size fittings must be used.

Safe waste pipes must be extra heavy cast iron, lead, copper, brass or galvanized iron pipe size, or any other materials and fittings approved by the Board or Bureau of Health.

SECTION 3.

SEPARATE TOILET ROOMS FOR EMPLOYES

Separate toilet rooms shall be provided for each sex in every establishment where both men and women are employed. These shall be clearly designated and no other person shall be permitted to use or frequent a toilet room assigned to the opposite sex.

The number of water closets to be provided for each sex shall in every case be based upon the maximum number of persons of that sex employed at any one time on the given floor or floors or in the given building for which such closets are provided, and there shall also be provided one wash stand for each sex.

NO. OF PERSONS.	NO. OF CLOSETS

31 to 50	3

In places of amusement such as theaters, dance halls, etc., toilet fixtures must be provided for the different sexes as follows:

Male toilet rooms must consist of one water closet, one wash stand and one urinal, where not more than fifty patrons may be assembled. For every fraction thereof one additional toilet must be provided, so there will never be more than fifty patrons per closet.

Female toilets must consist of one water closet, one wash stand and one sanitary container, where there would not be more than forty assembled. For every fraction thereof one additional toilet must be provided, so there will never be more than forty persons per toilet.

Where public wash stands are provided with easy access to closet compartments, it will not be necessary to install wash stands in the closet compartment.

Water closet compartments must not have any direct communication with any dining room or kitchen, nor shall any water closet be placed in any dining room or kitchen. Neither shall same have direct communication with a public dining room, restaurant or kitchen or be placed in any room or compartment which has not direct communication to external air, either by window or air shaft of at least four square feet, or some other approved means of ventilation that will change the air in these closet compartments not less than six times per hour. When any window ventilating any water closet compartment opens directly into a vent shaft, no window of any other room except water closet compartment or bath room shall open into such vent shaft.

SECTION 5. Floors of water closet compartments must have non-absorbent floor and base not less than 16" in height from the floor.

SECTION 6. All water closets and other fixtures must be supplied with sufficient water supply for flushing to keep them in a clean, proper sanitary condition.

Where trough urinals are used they must be constructed of materials impervious to moisture which will not corrode under the action of the urine. The floors and walls of all urinal compartments must be lined with similar non-absorbent and non-corrosive material. Where trough urinals are provided

Girl in the Family

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXIV.

The eager adventurous look died out of her brother's face as it hardened. A muscle near his jaw knotted itself. "Don't be a little sap," he said. "But, Susie, what do you suppose they've been doing with all the money that Grandfather Broderick left them?—You've heard them talk about the time when they had five servants and two electric runabouts in the family, and how Aunt Edna and Lutie used to go to New York twice a year to buy their clothes. They must have been wild with money then—and even five or six years ago we weren't poor the way we are now."

"Well, the rents at The Broderick Arms have been falling off, for one thing," Susan began, and then stopped abruptly. There was no conviction in her voice or in her mind. She realized that the decrease in the rents was very little compared to the difference between the old days of ease and plenty in the house and the lean days of the present.

"No, they had more than just the apartment," John said. "They had government bonds—the safest things in the world. They used to talk about them, but they never do any more. What I think is that they've been selling them for years. Spending everything that Grandfather left them until there's nothing left but this house and the apartment—and this place is mortgaged to the hilt. They all ought to have a guardian, if you ask me."

"But Uncle Worthy—isn't he supposed to be their trustee or something like that?" asked Susan, who, like the majority of women, knew practically nothing about business. "He's always handled the estate."

"Yep," said John with sarcasm sharpening his tone. "He has. With the result that we have a roomer in the house instead of a cook and are trying to rent our garage instead of keeping a car of our own in it. You know, Susie, there's a saying that goes something like this—'History is filled with the sound of wooden shoes climbing up the stairs and satin slippers coming down.' Well, I think the Brodericks' satin slippers are coming down in a hurry these days. This house will be a boarding house yet."

Old Houses Gone

That was what had happened to the Taylor house in the next block when old Mr. Stuyvesant Taylor died, Susan remembered. The Van Dorn house, around the corner on Stilwell street, had become a music school when the Van Dorns moved out of it to take possession of their new house in Chagrin Valley, and almost all of the other proud old mansions in the neighborhood had been torn down to make room for two-story business blocks or garages or four-family houses.

"If I go to Omaha, Uncle Worthy will rent my room, I imagine, and he'll do the same thing with Dad's when he moves all of his things over to Mrs. Hopper's place." John's voice ran on in the quiet room. (None of them ever called the new Mrs. Morris Broderick anything but "Mrs. Hopper.") "Oh, well, I suppose it's none of my business. When I tried to suggest to Uncle Worthy the other day that he sell the house or lease the land for a factory site, he shut me up . . . Let's go over to the Cullens' and see what's doing, Susie."

But for once the Cullens' house had no lure for Susan. Upstairs, behind the closed solid-walnut door of the front bedroom, Allen was busy with his law books. And so long as he was there her old family house was the only place on earth where she wanted to be.

Checks Wedding Guests

Early Monday morning Aunt Edna took the 1931 edition of the Social Register down from its place on the parlor book shelves and began to check off names for Susan's wedding invitations.

"Goodness gracious, Edna! Why do that now?" Lutie wanted to know. "There won't be any wedding for five or six months! I thought we were all going to pitch in and do the housework this morning."

"Well, I'm going to check off these names now," Aunt Edna declared, thrusting out her lower lip determinedly. "June isn't so very far away and there are all sorts of things to be done before then, and I'm going to get at them as I think of them. Some day we'll have to see about having some new covers made for all the old furniture in this house, and I'd like to have a new dress made for the wedding. I'd thought of gray chiffon, or perhaps a pansy-purple, but chiffon always makes me look as big as an elephant—" She talked on and on, verbally spending hundreds of dollars in preparation for Susan's wedding to Wallace.

"She'll spend hours on that nonsense, just to get out of doing any work—and she'll leave even her bed for us to make, you'll see!" Lutie remarked sourly to Susan as the two of them went around the house, dusting, running the carpet sweeper over the beautiful old rugs, collecting the part of the laundry that was to be sent out to the Imperial Wet Wash, putting the rest of it to soak in the wash tubs in the basement. "She won't do any more work from now on than she did when we had Anna. She says her feet hurt, but so do mine and I'm not complaining!"

By Tuesday Lutie had lost almost all of her energy for housework, but her good disposition had returned.

"The work isn't so dreadful hard after all," she assured Susan in her accustomed cheerful manner as she walked around the lower floor of the house flirting a feather duster at the furniture and bric-a-brac and stirring up a great deal of dust. She let Susan make all of the beds alone, and when it was time to go down into the basement and wash the clothes that had been soaked the day before, she was having a long conversation with her friend, Jessie Bunts, over the telephone. Susan went down alone.

An hour later she came to the head of the stairs that led to the basement and called down to Susan. "I think I'd better stay up here to answer the 'phone and the doorbell, don't you, Susan, childie? It'll soon be time for me to start lunch, too."

But when Susan came up into the kitchen at half past twelve nothing had been done toward preparing lunch. The stove was cold, and on the bare polished mahogany of the dining room table a corded white silk dress was spread out. Beside it, on a square of tissue paper, stood a pair of white kid slippers with bright paste buckles. From them rose a dry dusty odor of age and orris root.

"Your grandmother was married in this dress, Susan." Aunt Edna waved her short plump hands over it. "Lutie and I thought you'd like to have it made over for your own wedding dress. It's so smart, I think, to wear bridal things that have been in one's own family for a long time.

"I never knew what your own mother wore at her wedding, for I wasn't there," she wound up with a sniff and a twitching of her nostrils, as if she were proud of the fact that she had not been there.

"Well, whatever she wore, you may be sure she was the loveliest bride that any Broderick ever married," Susan answered quietly, and with that she went out into the kitchen to get the lunch ready.

On Wednesday morning Lutie went to a meeting of the Current Topics Club, which met every other Wednesday at 11 o'clock in the ball room of the Union Club downtown. The members of it were the wealthiest and most prominent women of the town, and Lutie had joined it 25 years before, when the Brodericks were among what Uncle Worthy called "the people of the city."

"And what do you think a little bird told me today!" she asked coyly of Susan when she came home at 1 o'clock and sat down at the luncheon table, still wearing her hat and her dotted veil and smelling faintly of the gasoline with which she had cleaned her white kid gloves. "That Wallace was engaged to Eleanor Kendall once upon a time!—And quite wild about her, too! Eleanor Kendall!"

Wallace Thrown Down

"Very odd that Mrs. Kendall didn't mention it to us when she was here on Christmas Day," remarked Uncle Worthy, turning a doubting eye upon Lutie as if he were saying, "Important if true," to himself.

"Well, odd or not, the fact is that Wallace and Eleanor were engaged," declared Lutie. She dropped a bit of sausage gravy on the front of her dress in her excitement and stopped for a moment to rub the spot with her napkin. "She threw him down when she went out to Akron on a visit and fell in love with the man that she married . . . Jessie Bunts told me the whole story this morning. They were engaged only a week or two."

"Jessie Bunts!" Aunt Edna's tone scorned Jessie Bunts and all her works. "If it were true, Jessie Bunts would have told us all about it on Christmas day. She never misses a chance to make people feel uncomfortable and take them down a peg or two."

Susan said nothing at all. Her mind had flown to the little jewelers' box upstairs in the drawer of her dressing table—the little box marked "Ludlow and Ludlow" . . . That was how Wallace happened to have that little box still in his possession years after Ludlow and Ludlow had gone out of business. He had bought the ring for Eleanor Kendall and when she had given it back to him he had carefully put it away for his second choice.

She wondered what Mrs. Kendall had thought on Christmas day when she had seen it glittering on her engagement finger. She must have recognized it as the one that Eleanor had once worn.

The days jogged along.

The house, dark with the fogs of January, was so large that Susan could not begin to take care of it properly. After the first few days Lutie fell by the wayside and did nothing but the work she had always done—changing the water in the fish globe, walking to market sometimes and cleaning her own bedroom with its framed pictures of Gibson girls, its curly maple furniture, its eternal odor of mothballs and wintergreen candy and heliotrope perfume.

Telephones Friends

The rest of the day she spent telephoning her few friends, reading before the parlor fire or sitting at the old piano to play the pieces of music that had been popular in her youth:

"I don't want to play in your yard,
I don't like you any more,
You'll be sorry when you see me,
Sliding down our cellar door—"

Sometimes she drifted into the kitchen and offered to peel the potatoes, which were usually peeled already, or sat down to keep Susan company while she went about her work.

Aunt Edna ordered the same stodgy meals that she had always ordered and did the mending between chapters of her murder stories and her long hard-fought games of Russian bank or backgammon with Uncle Worthy.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Almost every day we hear of some boy or girl being drowned while in swimming, fellows!

Swimming is wonderful sport and exercise, and lots of fun, but it is dangerous unless you take the proper care.

All Pittsburgh pools have life guards, and so does the wonderful pool in the County South Park. It is safe to swim in them. But there are some other pools not so well guarded, and many of the river beaches do not have any guards. Almost every year there are some boys and girls drowned.

We want the Junior Patrol to help as much as it can to stop such terrible accidents.

Ask your playmates not to swim where it is dangerous and where there are no lifeguards to keep watch. Often the best swimmers get into trouble, and so even if you can swim well don't be too bold.

We heard about a wonderful swimmer who got cramps in the cold water of a lake. He drowned before help could reach him.

No doubt many of our Junior Patrol members will be going on vacations. And you bet they will want to swim. Especially if they go to a lake or seashore.

But if they are wise they will not try to swim when they are tired or cold. And they won't try to "show off" and swim greater distances than they are able.

In the ocean surf, too, you have to be careful. A big roller may knock you down, and roll you under the waves.

How about your reading, fellows? We would like to get a book list from all Junior Patrol members that would show that everyone of you has been to the library and started to read some truly good books.

During the hot weather, when it is too hot during the day to run around much, it is always a swell idea to find a cool spot and do some reading. We're going to ask you, fellows, to look up every word you don't know the meaning of in the dictionary, too.

Daily Short Short-Story

By JEAN GILLESPIE

"Off with that dress," said Evelyn Decker.

Ann gasped. "Evelyn have you gone insane? Don't you realize that this is my office and that Mr. Dixon might come in?"

Evelyn shook her head determinedly. "I'm afraid not. I can't leave you standing about in your scanties on that chance. Up with your arms girl and into this."

She took a flame-colored armful of heavy silk from the open suit box on Ann's desk and slid it over Ann's dark head. It clung and outlined Ann's slim figure beautifully.

"Now your hair." She pushed Ann into a chair, took a comb from her bag and patted and pulled and pushed. Then she used lipstick and rouge and a dash of powder from her own compact and Ann Gates, efficient secretary to Richard Dixon, was gone. In her place stood an exotic creature all fire and flame and melting eyes. Evelyn stood back and surveyed her. "H'm, not bad. Now you can send me a check for the dress. That will help me out of a jam. I got the darned thing and then lost my job and never wore it. I'm going to knock on your boss' door and if that iced mackerel doesn't fall for you—well, he's nearer-sighted than I suspect."

Ann put up her hands to her burning cheeks. "But, Evelyn, I've been his private secretary for a year now and he's never noticed me. Why should he now?"

"Look in the mirror, girlie, and you'll see why."

"But he's staying downtown for dinner with a client of his—a man. I'm supposed to stay late and get out a special letter for him."

Evelyn was taking a wrap of gold brocade from the box. She draped it over Ann's shoulders. "Tell him you had a date for dinner and he didn't show up. Roll your eyes at him and you will have a date for dinner."

"I wouldn't if I were you," whispered Evelyn. "I hear your boss coming. So long and may your worse self be your guide." She whisked out of the room as Dixon entered.

He peered at her near-sightedly. "Miss Gates, I've broken my glasses. Oh, pardon me, has Miss Gates gone?"

"She seems to have gone," Ann said primly. She didn't recognize her own voice, so it was not strange that Dixon didn't.

He looked at her admiringly and smiled. "Did you come to see Miss Gates?"

"Not exactly. You see I was to meet a friend here and to go to dinner with him. But he didn't come."

"What a shame! And I suppose you're terribly hungry?"

Ann could scarcely believe her ears. Was Mr. Dixon serious? Hadn't he recognized her?

"I'm starved myself. Don't you think as long as you know my private secretary, Miss Gates, and we're both ready for dinner, well—don't you think we might go out and eat some place?"

"Am I supposed to say no?"

"I'd much rather you said 'yes'."

Ann laughed, a low little gurgle. "Very well, suppose we do." She didn't care whether he was spoofing her or not.

They left in a taxi. The lights were dim and the music was soft in the restaurant. Ann's eyes were like summer stars, her skin like spring roses. Dixon leaned across the table and stammered "You're lovely. The loveliest thing I've seen in years. And I don't even know your name."

* * *

"Good night, Mr. Dixon. I had a lovely time."

"Good morning, Miss Gates. Dictation, please."

Ann looked at his clear-cut profile. He had his glasses again. He could see better without glasses, she thought bitterly.

"Dear Annabelle"—he began. "I wish to retract what I said last night. I love another girl. I don't know whether she cares for me or not, but I'm going to find out right now." He looked up and grinned. Then he said: "Ann, drop that silly pencil and look at me!"

But how could she look at him when her face was crushed against the rough tweed of his coat and his lips were on her hair?

Through the Looking Glass

Well, we're cooling off about as rapidly as that glass mirror for the University of Texas telescope.

It weighs 3,500 boiling pounds and will not be normal until September. It would have been much less trouble for the college to pick up a smaller one in a pawn shop.

When the glass is cold enough for a small boy to scratch with a nail, it will be sent to Warner and Swasey to grind down. They are experts on big contracts. Warner told us that Swasey wouldn't think of handling a job that didn't call for a derrick.

After it is ground it will be air mailed to Texas where it will be set up in one of the Leviathan's smokestacks. Then the students will squint through it and get a look of horror from gazing at nothing.

No telescope was ever made big enough to keep an astronomer from closing his other eye. But you ask a student what he wants to study and he will pick astronomy. Anything to stay up all night.

The sky is very clear in Texas and the stars are bright. But before we credit Texas with discovering new planets we want a signed affidavit that it wasn't during the lightning bug season. We had better stop there because Pa Ferguson is mad at us now.

Not that the science of star spying ain't a noble career. But, when we look at the sky, we will take it all in one piece and not sliced up like rhubarb pie.

We know that royal decorations have been conferred upon nighthawks who discovered things that nobody else could see. But when the king pinned the red ribbon on Sir Alfie Palfa, did Sir Alfie know that the red ribbon was from the king's nightshirt? That made the transaction even, for Sir Alfie never saw that.

The mirror is now 80 per cent cooled off. They can send it to Texas in June and the natives will ice their beer on it. Texas is now 100 per cent hot. And when it's hot in Texas it's high noon in the oven.

Realizing that the college students have not yet seen the looking glass we will play Alice and tell them it is a pip. But one of the moving men is short and the other is tall. And you know what that kind of combination can do to a piano or anything expensive.

ODD FACTS

A remarkable cage has been prepared for the humming birds in the London Zoo. The cage, which is ornamented with tropical plants, has special thermostatic heaters to keep the temperature between 75 and 80 degrees. There are a fountain and a bathing pool, and the birds will take their food—a mixture of honey and a patent milk food—from feeding troughs shaped like flowers. In each flower is a small tube which contains the food, so that the birds can feed as though they were sucking honey with their long bills from real flowers.

Minnows solved a serious problem for the Italian engineers who wished to develop Istra, on the east shore of the Adriatic. The place was full of stagnant ponds in which malaria-bearing mosquitoes flourished. The pest was conquered by introducing a special type of minnow from the Carolinas, which eats mosquito eggs greedily.

The unerring exactness with which the sperm whale will pursue his way across the ocean for a whole day without deviating from his course a single point of the compass, as whale men have often remarked them to do, is truly astonishing. The manner in which their reason or instinct guides them on such an unvarying course must needs be a matter of conjecture.

Washington Irving in his early youth had a longing to go to sea and be a pirate. He determined to make the attempt, and wisely decided to prepare for it by preliminary experiences. He began by eating salt pork. That made him ill. Te then slept for a night or so on hard boards. That made him sore. He had no more desire to go to sea.

Steel Strike Averted

Appointment of Labor Relations Board Expected to Keep Peace in Industry

The question of union recognition in the steel industry has not been settled, but the appointment of the National Steel Labor Relations Board by President Roosevelt has provided a means for adjusting disputes over this and other questions in the future. The menace of a steel strike has been removed and it is a tribute to the good sense of both sides that they have co-operated in the peace plan.

Strikes rarely are worth the hardships, privations, expense and violence from the standpoint of either employers or employes. The strike should be used only as a last resort and when all efforts to reach amicable settlements of problems have failed. In avoiding this strike, the steel companies and steel workers have saved themselves from great injury.

Too much credit cannot be given to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and to Michael F. Tighe, veteran president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, for their efforts to settle the difficulty without resorting to violent means. Tighe was the balance wheel of the meeting of the steel workers here two weeks ago.

Tighe has learned about strikes in the bitter school of experience. He knows what they mean—what they mean to the wives and the families deprived of food and exposed to violence. When Tighe was a young man, his year and a half old baby died of malnutrition during a strike.

The first firecracker victim of this season was trated at the St. Francis Hospital yesterday. The victim had not been playing with firecrackers. Miss Ellen Mitchell, 20 was walking when she was struck by a firecracker thrown by an unidentified person. This, undoubtedly, is only the first of a long list of casualties which occur every year.

Council has adjourned and it is too late to do any- thing about correcting the city's ordinance regulating fireworks this year. But prompt action must be taken by Council to save thoughtless children and stupid adults from maiming themselves and endangering others in the future. At present there is no law against the use of fireworks. They may be sold by licensed dealers between June 25 and July 5.

The needless casualties of Independence Day, 1935, may be blamed on the nine members of City Council if they do not prohibit the sale and use of fireworks before next year. Here are the names of those men: John J. Kane, Walter R. Demmler, Thomas J. Gallagher, John M. Huston, Robert Garland, Charles Anderson, William J. Soost, William A. Magee and P. J. McArdle.

Mayor McNair has vetoed the sale of an addi- tional $500,000 of the city's direct relief bonds. He declared that the issuing of bonds for ordinary necessities is not sound practice. The money was to be used for medical service, light, coal stoves, maternity care, glasses and clothing for school children. The voters thought the bonds were justified when they approved the issue in 1932. The Mayor's stand in this instance is indefensible.

Attorney John G. Buchanan at the Pennsylvania State Bar Association convention suggested that Superior Court judges be elected for life, subject to removal only through impeachment. Their terms now are 10 eyars.

The Superior Court, due to recent legislative enactments, has become a most important judicial body and should be divorced from politics, as far as it is possible to divorce any judicial body from political considerations. The fact that the judges must run every 10 years inevitably serves to keep their eye on political matters if they wish to continue on the bench.

It will be recalled that in the last Superior Court election there was a coldly practical political deal between Republican faction which did not take into consideration the qualifications of a number of men involved in the dicker.

Perhaps a life term is not advisable, justices of the Supreme Court being elected only for 21 years, and then not eligible to re-election. It might be well to consider some such tenure for the Superior Court judges.

Grant of a PWA loan of $350,000 insures the construction of a new juvenile detention home for Allegheny County. Work should be pushed on this project at once.

The present juvenile detention home is a relic of an archaic attitude toward child wards of the county. The first contact of these children with the law—many of them in the court through no fault of their own—as it is exemplified in the inadequate building now used for a home, cannot give them a very sympathetic regard for justice.

Even a most kindly attitude by the judge and the various attaches of the Juvenile Court cannot compensate for the deficiencies of the old home. Judge Gustav Schramm and the County Commissioners, as well as the civic groups who worked so hard to procure this loan, deserve the thanks of the whole community.

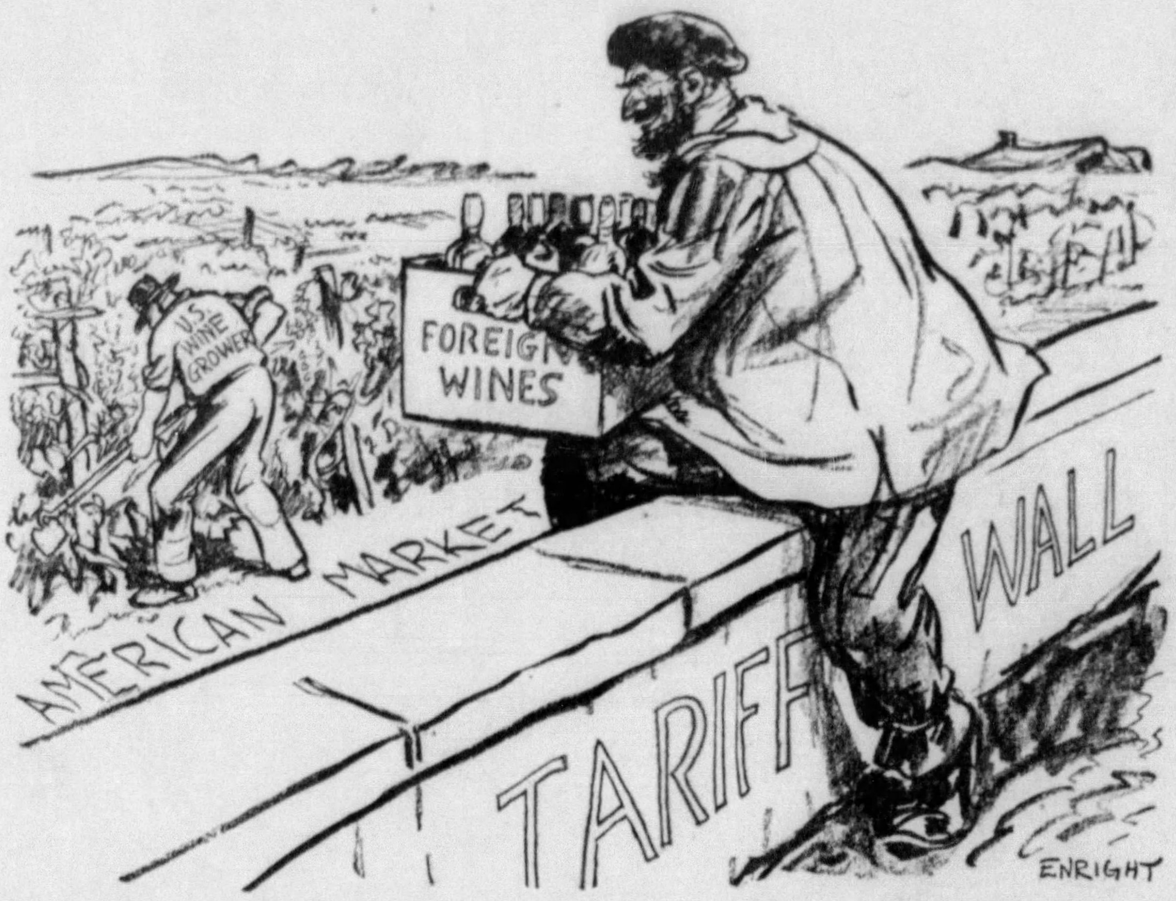
Seeking relief from heat during the next two summer months, thousands in the Pittsburgh district will be using neighboring pools and streams for swimming. Already there has been a severe toll of deaths from drowning, and this roster of sorrow will grow unless certain elemental safeguards are observed.

Where lifeguards are employed, at pools and reg- ular bathing beaches, there is supervision, though even the most alert and efficient guard is not always proof against a tragedy, as was demonstrated at Highland Park earlier in the week.

Bathers must take thought for their own safety. Swimming is a recreation and a refreshing sport. But it also is an exertion which should not be put as a strain upon a body not in condition to meet the demands of muscular action. Swimming after having eaten heavily, or when one is debilitated, becomes not a sport, but a hazard to life, something Such those seeking recreation should remember for their An head of ety.

Over the Tariff Wall

(Copyright, 1934.)



It will be many a day before the public forgets our recent apple deal with France.

Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment had reopened the American market to the wine trade. Under the quota system then adopted France obtained a large share of this market, promising in return to buy American apples.

But the French tariffs kept our apple trade from amounting to much, while the new wine trade gained by France amounted to a great deal. For our tariff on wines is simply a revenue tariff, virtually useless as a trade measure.

Meanwhile, in California especially, our own vineyardists are developing what is practically a new American industry—and the wide world knows that America produces wines of excellent quality.

Since the time of Hamilton it has been sound American policy to develop American industries by means of protective tariffs. And the American wine industry should have this protection. As the New York American said editorially recently:

"The President should act under his new broad discretionary tariff policies to raise the duty on foreign wines to the maximum permitted."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 30.—It's difficult to stay in town with everybody off on a week-end. I had planned to clear off my desk, clocken a few old books and at sundown take my dog and a borrowed English bull named Eddie from a dog shop to the park. But great open spaces won and we bowled off in the car for a green escapade.

Although morning headlines rang of riot and social unrest, we had, in 60 minutes, reached settled security of the countryside near Darien, Conn. This is the same countryside that has witnessed so many eras of futility, bloodshed and despair. Yet whose calm bespeaks touchingly a nation's moral fiber.

Cities these days whimper the melancholy of a hypochondriac. But out here so far as the eye could see nothing seemed sullen, beauty sprang from every turn—a foaming orchard, blue-belled meadow, field of clover, an old silver-shingled barn, lilac bowered cottage and now and then the chuckle of a waterfall.

I thought of Miss Sackville-West's exquisite poem, "The Land." And wondered if America has entirely lost feeling for the earth. Every farm boy that writes is juggling a scheme to get away from the plow. Almost every girl on the prairie cottage porch is straining her eyes toward Hollywood.

Caught and held fast by the city, I'm glad to feel firmly, rooted to the soil. My happiest days were spent on a farm and in very small towns. To have no country background is one of Life's cruel omissions. As great as George M. Cohan is, I've wished he had pitched hay and drunk from a gourd dipper. Dorothy Parker, with an outland viewpoint, would have fewer barbs for stinging cynicisms.

* * *

In California I was interested in the go-back-to-ranches among movie folk—Bing Crosby, Francis Lederer, W. R. Sheehan, Gary Cooper and others. Super-sophisticates escaping into mountain greenery. Every millionaire in New York beats back-country when he has amassed his fortune. But is usually too late to catch up with the tranquility so long denied himself. The tickers and telephones still ring in his ears. The eternal see-saw—city folk going rural and rurals going city!

* * *

The most confirmed metropolite Jimmy Walker has confessed to intimates he never realized the emptiness of his materialism until he drifted out of the chaos into the bucolic charm of England's Surrey. He once thought the tin-trumpetings of "Sidewalks of New York" by a jazz band sweetest of music. But he now appreciates swinging lines of that most ardent Londoner, Robert Herrick, who sang in his similarly enforced exile

. . . Of brooks, of blossoms, birds and bowers,
Of April, May, of June, of July flowers;
Of bridegrooms, brides, and of their bridal cakes.

* * *

There's not a nerve-torn New Yorker who does not hope to find at the end of the road a friendly cottage. Instead of the cocktail and caviar, he hungers, like George Meredith, for "a good plateful of sky." For a new-born morning without jangle or roar. For a silence pierced only by birds.

* * *

A ride to the country reveals there are still charming inns. Fraunce's Tavern sort without jazz, hat-snatching or masters of ceremony. Charming places marked with deep lines of character. Friendly eyes, kindly manners. They seek no limelight but are lost in cultivated neatness to only those who seek them out.

* * *

Indeed, a misturn on the old Saw Mill River road coming home this evening revealed one snug in the dimness of dove-gray twilight. It had been there a long time for its visitors' book revealed the names of Chauncey Depew, Minnie Maddern Fiske, John Fox, Jr., and lesser signatures of several long gone. Everything was snail-powered yet suggestive of the quaint rhythm of the minuet. Too, a sweetly sustained thread of sadness. My wife compared it to the little lost air in the first movement of a Russian concerto, the name of the composer of which I cannot spell.

* * *

So serene the rustic day, so hey, trololly lolly lo the ruminations, I needed no "Where d'je think yer goin'?" from that traffic cop on the Hotel Gotham corner. I knew I was dizzy—drunk with rural rhythm. But he should let me bowl on. As it was he aroused me to how cheap, second-rate and bawdy the greatest of cities can be after a day in the country.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

'The Foundations of Their World—Always Quivering With Uncertainty'

One hears that there are going to be ructions in America this summer. Maybe a General Strike. Certainly minor strikes and riots in every part of the country. Workers and employers snarling at each other, bristling with resentment and suspicion. The devil to pay generally.

And when it starts several millions of well-fed, comfortably housed American citizens (will you be one?) are going to say:

"How do those fellows get that way? Demanding $1.50 per hour—I like their nerve! Trouble is, they've had it too soft. Maybe if they were over in China or Russia they might have a right to complain. But why should they do it here, in the richest country in the world, where the workers have always had the best break?

"Why, lookit the line of automobiles outside any factory! Radios and electric refrigerators in almost every home. Living like millionaires, all of them—then striking for something better!"

As the summer strikes come many comfortable citizens are going to say just that, and feel that they're stating the simple truth. And they'll be highly indignant if anyone tells them that none of their pleasing, popular theories about the workers' lot in America are true.

But they aren't! The American laborer ISN'T the "best-paid, best-trained worker on earth." Nor is America the "richest country on earth" for the average citizen.

Why are they striking when they've had such a swell deal? They're striking because for generations they have suffered the bondage of dreariness, drudgery and discouragement without any hope of betterment.

All around them was flaunting evidence of such wealth and luxury as the world has never known. Their luckier neighbors shared in that luxury; they themselves were exhorted to share in it, from every advertising page, from every movie film. They were told in school that it was their "right." They heard America boasting to the world that she gave her workers such "rights." Their fathers came seeking those "rights."

BUT FOR THE OVERWHELMING MAJORITY OF AMERICAN WORKERS THESE "RIGHTS" NEVER MATERIALIZED. FOR THEM, AMERICA HAS NEVER BEEN A RICH COUNTRY, NOR A FREE OR KIND COUNTRY. IT HAS BEEN A COUNTRY OF CALLOUS GREED, BRUTAL INDIFFERENCE, MONSTROUS INJUSTICE.

There came, it is true, occasional "good times." During such periods they clutched feverishly at that happiness they had seen flaunted. Started to buy an auto, a radio, a washing machine, a little piece of land. But they were never certain.

NO CERTAINTY—that was the cruelest part of it. No certainty—because there was nothing in the framework of American business which guaranteed certainty for the worker.

Then she gives a few figures which may jolt your belief in the American worker's "soft snap." For example—

"An analysis of the budgets of a group of girls earning $6 a week showed that only ten cents was left after the bare necessities were paid for. The average annual earnings of wage workers in the United States as computed by the National Bureau of Economic Research for the year 1911 was $540. The average for manufacturing salaried workers was $1,260.

Those figures were compiled 20 years ago and there have been improvements since. But if wages have risen, so have living costs. If hours have decreased, so have jobs. The average worker's lot is still as uncertain; still as dreary and discouraging.

I sat at the opening of a mine shaft and talked to a gaunt, ragged fellow with angry eyes. I worked in a shaft like that myself once. I knew what lay behind that gauntness—and the anger in those eyes. I knew what it meant to go down every day on those rotten timbers, into workings from which a trapped man didn't have one chance in a million to come out alive. We talked about The Strike.

"Why shouldn't we strike?" he asked. "What we got to lose? It can't be any worse than we've always had. Maybe it'll be better."

"How do they get that way?"

The Fear of Facing the Truth

By Winifred Black

HOIGHTY TOITY is having rather a bad time of it these days—poor Hoighty Toity.

I can't bear to see her looking downcast, she's usually so delighted with herself and her family, her grandmother and her aunts and the old man who used to hold her horse for her, when she went for a ride in the gay days of old. And there are the nurse who curled her hair and the cook in the kitchen who did such marvelous things with hominy and chickens and the old coachman who drove with such dexterity and grace, and how he loved to draw up to the church on a Sunday morning with a decorous flourish of his whip.

And the dogs she had when she was a girl, a whole kennel full of them. Imported, too, if you please, straight from the royal kennels at Windsor, and the lovely parties her mother gave for her and the sweet dresses of flowered muslin she wore, and the great closets full of linens and laces, and the fine embroideries and delicate fabrics that were always to be found in the great trunks up in the great attic.

I love to hear Hoighty Toity tell about these things, it make me feel so rich and prosperous and popular and proud and carefree.

No worrying over bills, no anxious hours trying to make the bank account come right—everything free and fair and glorious and gorgeous.

Dear Hoighty Toity, what a darling she is, to be sure.

As good as gold, as kind as the summer sunshine, as generous as old Mother Earth herself.

It was quite a shock to me when I went down to the part of the country where Hoighty Toity lived when she was a little girl.

The old house was still standing—I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw it.

There was not a thing magnificent about it. It was just rather a plain old house with not so very many rooms and where, oh where, were the great stables she had told of so often.

And the neighbors said that Hoighty Toity's family was never in the least rich or powerful or even very gay.

They were just plain, honest, kindly folk with rather an easy going way of living, and the marvelous cook worked from daylight till dark for something like three a week and her board. And the coachman's coat was often almost ragged and as for the nurse who took care of the little Hoighty Toity she was just the little half-grown daughter of a poor relation, and not such a very good nurse at that.

No, I don't think Hoighty Toity meant to be deceitful about these things, she just saw them that way, that's all.

She sees everything of her own through a mist of streaming golden sunshine, and her eyes are a little dazzled—that's all.

Dear Hoighty Toity, I wouldn't be cross with her for the world and I do hope she will get back into the sunshine again—somebody told her the plain truth about her rather good for nothing, stupid son the other day and it was a terrible shock.

I do hope she gets over it, and thinks again that he is the handsomest, most brilliant, most promising young man in the world.

For I really do believe that if Hoighty Toity had to face the truth, she would just lie down and die.

And that would be entirely too bad, for she is good and kind and there's something sweet and childlike about her that helps to sweeten the world wherever she is.

One Baby Face

What Future Would You Predict for It?

JOHN DILLINGER, AGED EIGHT MONTHS.

This "Dear Little Baby," with innocent eyes looking out on the world, high forehead, apparently fortelling efficiency and useful work, if not genius, is none other, if you please, than John Dillinger, gangster, kidnaper, murderer, as he appeared at the age of eight months.

But this face, as years have passed, has become the face of John Dillinger, most dangerous of outlaws, who recently held up and terrorized 35 prison officials with the aid of a toy pistol whittled out of a broomstick handle.

It is suggested, by the way, that Dillinger, in his escape, used something more effective than a little woden pistol, namely, a substantial sum of money, in return for which some of his jailers helped to make his escape very easy. Investigation is now going on and will, perhaps, confirm that.

Meanwhile this picture, showing a baby with a top head bigger than that of Walter Scott, reminds you that as regards man's future "only time can tell." The same child, under different conditions, with different ambitions instilled in him at the beginning, different training, different environment, might have been a useful citizen.

No man or woman is BORN a criminal, although many, through weakness and bad ancestry, are born weak in will prone to crime, yielding easily to temptation.

Some student of physiognomy, looking at this baby, mig point out that the left eye is rather smaller than the righ and set higher up in the face. The great Italian criminologist, Lombroso, says that such asymmetry, lack of symmetrical balance, is often an indication of criminal tendencies.

Common sense, however, seems to tell us that it is th construction of the brain back of the forehead, the influence brought to bear on it from birth onward, rather than "on eye higher than the other," that decides a useful or a crimi nal life.

This little face, as you see it in the photograph, is a blan map of future life, on which almost anything, probably, coul have been written. After a murderous, thieving career ther is written on the face, now full-grown, only crime and evi with the electric chair in the background. Parents, teache and society bear a heavy burden. All share the responsibilit for what happened to this baby face.

Edward Bellamy Predicted Many Developments of Present Time—Togo's Victory Still Makes History

By Edwin C. Hill

ON that night recently when Alfred P. Sloan's 300 prophets were telling what the world might expect and look forward to in the next decade and the next century, a lady past 70 was talking to reporters in New York City about a man who, in 1887, foretold many of the things which are coming to pass in these times. He was her husband, Elward Bellamy, author of "Looking Backward," a prophetic novel on an economic theme which has been surpassed in sales only by "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Bellamy was neither a Socialist nor a social reformer, and yet most of his theories and doctrines have been appropriated by those who since his time have advocated a radical change in the capitalistic system. Even technocracy, that fetish of a year or so ago, borrowed largely from the dreams of Edward Bellamy.

* * *

Utopia Used Credit Instead of Money

AS ONE remembers, the technocrats were to do away with money and pay wages in ergs. In Ballamy's Utopia there was to be no money either, the individual being paid according to his merit in the form of credits at a central store.

"Looking Backward" told the story of a man who went to sleep in 1887 and awakened in the year 2,000 A. D. A Dr. Leete explained to him all that had happened in the United States that one hundred and thirteen years that he was emulating Rip Van Winkle. Discussing the nineteenth century, Dr. Leete went on to tell how he, in 2,000 A. D., was puzzled as to how the "shrewd fellows" of 1887 came to permit the waste and capital by misdirected industry with the attendant industrial warfare and periodical convulsions which overwhelmed the wise and the unwise alike. He said:

"I refer to the business crises at intervals of five to 10 years, which wrecked the industries of the nation, prostrating all weak industries and crippling the strongest, and were followed by long periods, often by many years, of so-called dull times, during which the capitalists slowly regathered their dissipated strength while the laboring classes starved and rioted. Then would ensue another brief session of prosperity followed in turn by another crises and the ensuing years of exhaustion."

Bellamy foretold many of the things which have taken place in Russia under its five year plan, although in his Utopia the revolution was bloodless and not a fomented by the Reds.

Defeat of Russians Fixed Japan's Destiny

JAPAN'S national hero has d parted to whatever world reserved for heroes, and with hi goes an epoch in the life of th nation. It was Fleet Admiral Ma quis Heihachiro Togo, who almos single-handed, lifted Japan to t rank of a great world power. was tiny little Togo who ma more history than any single i dividual has made since Napole

That day in 1904, when Admi Togo trapped the Russian fleet Tsushima, in the Sea of Japa and sunk or captured every o of Admiral Rojestvensky's ships, Japan became a modern n tion, sensing her own powe glimpsing herself as mistress the Far East.

If Togo had been beaten in th desperate sea fight, 30 years ag Japan would have been no mor important today than Portugal o Siam. That Battle of the Sea o Japan was one of the de battles of history, and no m knows today what consequenc may yet arise from that terri encounter.

The passing of Togo, the powd mill of Asia, ready for the explo ing spark, all tend to throw i high relief the critical state of world today. Over at Geneva disarmament conference died its feet, producing nothing wh ever except bickering, mad l guage and what Mr. Alfred Smith so picturesquely terms "I loney."
